TAX REVISION BILL SWEEPS HOUSE, 388 TO 7

Is Expected to Yield 258 Million.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—With only seven dissenting votes the house of representatives today passed the 258 million dollar tax revision bill through which the administration hopes to fortify its revenue statutes against evasion.

Although the vote which passed the bill was 388 to 7, an earlier roll call on a Republican motion to restore the former two cent first class postage rate found 132 members of the house dissatisfied with the legislation in the form in which it finally passed. The postage motion was lost, however, when 272 votes were cast against it and most of those who had favored recommitting the bill on that issue hastened to vote for its final approval.

Britten Explains Vote.

Among the seven who opposed the tax bill on the final roll call were Representatives Fred A. Britten and Everett Dirksen, Illinois Republicans. Mr. Britten, explaining his vote, declared that he was strenuously opposed to the administration tax program because it increased taxes in various directions, because it levied a new import tax on foreign vegetable oils, and because it retained for another year the present tax on bank checks and the higher postage rate.

The measure now goes to the senate, where far reaching alterations are expected to be made. Members of the house ways and means committee, who spent six months drafting the bill, admitted today that they were not at all certain all the existing loopholes in the present federal tax laws had been plugged by the bill, and were even more inclined to agree that tax lawyers will be able to find new methods of evading the fortified laws.

Of principal interest to the average taxpayer is the bill's readjustment of the income tax rate structure to provide a new normal rate of 4 per cent and surtaxes starting at 4 per cent on net income above $4,000 and ranging in graduated brackets to 59 per cent on incomes of a million dollars or more. The new tax rates, however, will not be effective on 1933 incomes.

Designed to Plug Loopholes.

The bill also provides for a credit against net income subject to normal tax equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the taxpayer's earned income. The deduction is limited to lower salaries, however, by stipulating that no income over $8,000 shall be considered as earned. On the other hand, incomes of not more than $3,000 are to be considered as earned, whether they are or not.

Generally the bill is designed to prevent such tax evasion methods as were disclosed during the recent investigations of the senate banking and currency committee into stock market practices. From this tightening up of the federal tax laws some 234 million dollars annually is expected to come into the treasury, with an additional 24 millions from miscellaneous provisions of the measure, including the new import tax on cocoanut and sesame oils and a domestic excise tax on oil produced in this country.

BEST TREASURY DAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The federal treasury today reported itself richer than ever before in history.

Five billion dollars, enough to give every man, woman and child in the country $40, was lying in the treasury's cash fund, the department's daily condition statement revealed.

Most of the money came from the paper profit on the national gold stocks which resulted from devaluation of the dollar. Almost all of the rest has been borrowed. At the same time, however, the treasury reported an increase in its tax collections.

Tax Collections Increase.

A flood of money has poured into the treasury during the last two months, resulting in today's record breaking cash balance. Two billion 800 million dollars came from devaluation of the dollar, another 2 billion or more has been borrowed, and taxes, according to a report on January collections made public today, have increased steadily.

Of the 5 billions which the treasury held, however, 2 billions have been earmarked for the government's new stabilization fund with which it

Gaw Duns City for $16,347 as Greeting Cost

Members of the city council finance committee had a bit of a shock yesterday when they learned about the high cost of handshaking in the good old days. Col. (Kentucky and Oklahoma) George D. Gaw, who once held the title of Chicago's official greeter and had a big white automobile and a lot of motorcycle escorts to help him entertain the great and the near great who descended upon us, filed a claim with the committee for $16,347, alleging that this amount had been paid out by him in pursuance of his arduous duties.

Col. Gaw held the greeter's position for some twenty months. The statistics show, therefore, that his genial efforts at making Chicago popular cost an average of about $780 a month. Official figures on the numbers of hands wrung by him are lacking, but assuming that ten worthwhile ones were shaken per day, it appears that $2.50 a shake was a conservative guess at the costs of the office.

City's Phenomenon No. 1.

It was on July 3, 1931, that he took the job. It was only a little while until he became one of the most familiar of Chicago phenomena. His white suit, white hat, and white automobile, to say nothing of his motorcycle accompaniment, were seen hither and yon and pedestrians craned their necks as he passed and wondered what mayor or movie actress was favoring the city.

The greeter, as he was familiarly known, did not devote himself exclusively to the physical aspects of his profession. He authored a song, "Greetings, Chicago Welcomes You," with a chorus beginning: "O, Chicago's proud to be that city of destiny." Critics generally applauded the sentiments expressed, but a few of them were captious about the rimes.

Lectures Traffic Policemen.

To raise the morale of the traffic policemen he gave them a few lectures, by invitation, on how to greet strangers.

"Be extra nice to visitors," he said. "Let's show the out of towners what a warm hearted place Chicago is."

He also wrote out a series of ceremonial greetings, some suitable for visiting mayors, others for traveling Englishmen, others for delegates to restaurant conventions, and still others for incoming Boy Scouts. The variety and ingenuity of these won praise.

At the height of his career, in November, 1932, Greeter Gaw suffered an accident to his right hand at a Hallowen party and was out of the game for some weeks. A pinch hitter, Col. [Mex] George Brumlik, a garage owner, took over for a while. The office went out of fashion when Mayor Kelly took office and Col. Gaw has since devoted himself to his envelope business.

Files Letters and Clippings.

With his claim Mr. Gaw filed letters of appreciation which he had received from persons he greeted, newspaper clippings, and a list of appointments that he kept, but no itemized account of his expenditures. He explained, however, that he has receipts for all the money spent which he can produce before the aldermen.

"There is no salary for me in the bill," Mr. Gaw said. "I ask only to be reimbursed in accordance with an agreement made with the late Mayor Cermak, who appointed me, for the money I paid out for a secretary, stenographers, automobile hire, telegrams, telephone service, and the other routine expenditures of my department.

"The late mayor proposed to set up a special fund for the expense of the greeting department, but he was busy and I was busy and a special appropriation never was set up. I would have put the claim before the finance committee earlier, but my unfamiliarity with city business practices delayed action."

NEW SCANDAL SHAKES FRANCE; JURIST IS SLAIN

Victim Was Key Man in Stavisky Case.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 21.—A new mystery of blood and politics in the wake of the $60,000,000 Stavisky scandal broke today on France, which was just beginning to breathe easy again after the recent riots.

The new mystery was precipitated by the murder of Albert Prince, counselor of the Court of Appeals and key witness in the Stavisky case. Prince's mangled body was found on the Paris-Dijon railroad tracks this morning after he had been lured from Paris yesterday by an elaborate frameup.

The jurist was a former head of the financial section of the Paris district attorney's office, which had handled the Stavisky case from the adventurer's first arrest in 1926.

Reveal Spy Plot.

As they began an investigation of Prince's death the police announced the discovery of evidence that Serge [Handsome Alex] Stavisky had been an international spy as well as a swindler. This evidence, it was stated, indicated that he was aided by a number of women, including two actresses of foreign birth. It was believed that he had sold considerable valuable information to the Hitler government of Germany.

That Judge Prince was murdered was established tonight when an autopsy performed at Dijon revealed that he was already dead when his body was placed on the tracks in the path of a speeding express train. The cause of death—possibly because the corpse was almost ground to bits by the wheels of the train—could not be determined. A blood stained knife was found near the body.

Several turns of cord knotted about the left ankle indicated that the murderers had tied the corpse to a rail to make sure the wheels would pass over it. A severed fragment of the same cord was found attached to the rail. The murderers evidently hoped identification would be impossible or that investigators would think his death accidental. Identification was established by effects from his pockets found near the body.

Removes Key Witness.

Prince had been scheduled to present a report on the Stavisky investigation this morning to Justice Lescouve of the Supreme court, who is preparing material for the parliamentary committee investigating the scandal.

Prince's testimony would have dealt with one of the most vital points of the whole case—why the voluminous reports on Stavisky's crooked activities, made over a period of years by Detective Pachot, were never turned over to the proper authorities, thus enabling the adventurer to continue his career until last December.

Prince reputedly knew exactly what officials had intervened to protect the crook and was prepared to tell. The dramatic nature of the coincidence was heightened by the fact that this particular phase of the investigation, which was considered closed, was ordered reopened by Minister of Justice Henri Cheron last Monday on discovery of an important new document.

Political Passions Rise Again.

Whether this was anything more than a coincidence may never be known, but one thing already is evident. The Russian adventurer who despoiled France with the Bayonne municipal pawnshop bond swindle and others during his life and became its evil genius after his death—he was the immediate cause of the recent bloody uprisings—has struck again from beyond the grave.

Political passions, momentarily calmed by Premier Gaston Doumergue, are boiling once more. The suspicious French public, already skeptical about Stavisky's alleged suicide in a cottage at Chamonix, is convinced the new murder was committed to shut a dangerous witness' mouth and the opposition press is beginning to exploit the case for all it is worth.

The ruse by which Prince was lured to Dijon was a long distance telephone call which his wife received yesterday morning. A man claiming to be a Dr. Ehringer, physician to Prince's aged mother, announced she was critically ill. Prince left for Dijon. Police established the fact that he reached that city, but lost the trail there. A few hours later his body was found on the railway tracks.

Two Policemen Risk Lives on Ice to Rescue Dog

Policeman Michael Regan and Ernest Otto of Evanston last night risked their lives to crawl out to the edge of the shore ice in the lake, off the suburb's Main stret, and rescue a police dog that was lying on the ice. The dog, which had been on a floating cake of ice for hours, was suffering from exposure and unable to move. It was taken to an animal hospital.

Iowan Battles 2 Abductors in Loop Hotel

A kidnaper's confession last night solved the bizarre mystery of an attempted abduction in the corridor of a loop hotel earlier in the day, which was frustrated when the intended victim, a wealthy Iowa publisher and banker, fought off two assailants and effected the capture of one.

The kidnapers had planned to drug their victim and after he was unconscious put him in a large trunk and secrete it in a house on the south side until a ransom of $40,000 had been paid.

The kidnaper seized was Charles W. Mayo, alias Charles Clyde Phillips, 28 years old, of Birmingham, Ala. He named his companion, who escaped, as Jack Wyman of Des Moines, Ia.

Hunt Alleged Accomplice.

A squad of police which was sent to 6522 South Irving avenue on a tip that Wyman lived there failed to find him. They arrested, however, a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Minnie Lacey. Questioned at the Criminal Courts building, she said her husband sometimes used the name of Jack Wyman. She said he had taken her to their home last evening and then driven away.

Their plot was directed against E. P. Adler of Davenport, Ia., owner of a chain of daily newspapers, who was in Chicago attending a meeting of the Inland Daily Press association at the Morrison hotel. During his stay here he occupied a room on the fifth floor of that hotel and it was in the corridor just outside his own door that he fought a thrilling battle for his life and escaped because of his agility in eluding his attackers despite his 61 years.

Find Trunk with Air Holes.

Though the kidnapers battered him over the head with blackjacks the publisher summoned help from the hotel lobby and returned to the scene of the attack in time to cause the capture of Mayo. In the latter's room, adjoining Adler's, the police found the huge trunk, perforated with air vents, in which they planned to cart away their victim.

After his capture Mayo was questioned by policemen and Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan, but he steadily refused to admit that an attempt had been made to kidnap the Iowa editor. He insisted for hours that he and his companion planned only to rob Adler.

Confesses Kidnaping Plot.

Shortly before midnight, however, Mayo broke down and confessed the kidnaping plot to Sergt. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's office, who had been closeted with him alone in a room in the state's attorney's office for about an hour and a half.

"I was afraid to admit we had tried to kidnap him because the country is so aroused right now against kidnapings," Mayo said. "But I guess I'll get the rap anyway, so I might as well tell about it.

"We were going to knock Adler senseless, drug him, and put him in that trunk. With pillows stuffed around the body, we figured we could have it sent out of the hotel as if it were filled with books and moved down on the south side, where we were going to keep him until we got $40,000.

Plan Ransom Demand.

"The scheme was really Wyman's idea. I met him in Des Moines about a month ago. Neither one of us had any money. He suggested that we kidnap some one and hold the person for ransom, and mentioned Adler's name. He said we could easily get $40,000 because a man with money would pay that and not take it to the police, so that we could pull the job without much trouble.

"Off and on we kept making the plans and waiting for an opportunity. Last Thursday we drove over to Daven-

CHILDREN LINK BANGHART WITH KIDNAPING GANG

State Ends Evidence in Touhy Trial.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

In a remarkable scene in Judge Michael Feinberg's court yesterday a 14 year old boy and a 9 year old girl gravely identified a Touhy gangster, Basil [The Owl] Banghart, as one of the two men who escaped from a police trap last Aug. 15 after attempting to collect additional ransom of $50,000 from John Factor, the wealthy speculator.

Although Banghart is not on trial for the Factor kidnaping with Roger Touhy, Albert Kator, and Gus Schaefer, the identification of him as one of the Touhy gang who figured in the second ransom attempt was regarded by the prosecution as damaging evidence against the defendants. Banghart, it has been proved, was an intimate of Touhy.

State Closes Its Evidence.

The dramatic identification by the children came just before the state closed the powerful case which it has built up at this second trial against Touhy and his two co-defendants, who are charged with kidnaping Factor last July 1 and collecting $70,000 ransom on July 12.

Previously Factor had repeated on the witness stand the story he told at the first trial—which ended in a disagreement of the jury—and had identified Touhy, Kator, and Schaefer as his kidnapers.

This morning the defense will start presenting its case. Judge Feinberg ruled that court would be held today despite the fact that it is Washington's birthday, a legal holiday.

Defense Is a Mystery.

What the defense will be remained a mystery last night. Defense Attorney William Scott Stewart specializes in spectacular moves which he keeps well hidden until it is time to show his hand. It was said that he might put the defendants on the witness stand. They did not testify at the first trial.

It was regarded as probable that the defense would again offer medical testimony intended to cast doubt on Factor's identification of the defendants.

A physician at the first trial testified that a man who has been blindfolded does not recover clear vision for some minutes after the blindfold is removed. Factor has admitted that he had only glimpses of the kidnapers when the bandages were taken from his eyes.

Children Point Out Banghart.

The two children who identified Banghart in court were Leo Landall, 14 years old, and his niece, Marguerite Ferran, who is only five years younger than her uncle. They said Banghart was the man who appeared at their house in Westchester last Aug. 15 and succeeded in persuading John Landall, Leo's father, to drive him out of a police trap. Banghart's story to Landall was that he was fleeing after having been surprised in the company of another man's wife.

The bringing of Banghart into court was almost an unprecedented action, according to attorneys. He appeared from the county jail under a heavy guard. As he stood before the witness stand, a sullen figure, his mop of sandy hair hanging over his bowed head, he heard the excited treble of first the boy and then the girl as they exclaimed: "That's the man!"

Later the elder Landall and his wife corroborated this identification.

Identified Also by Policemen.

Policemen Frank McKenna and John R. Meyer, who were disguised on Aug. 15 as a telegraph messenger boy and a cab driver respectively, told the jury of driving out to 22d street and Wolf road with a decoy package containing $500 and delivering the package to two men in a car whom they identified as Charles [Ice Wagon] Connors and Banghart. Banghart was again brought into court and identified by the two policemen as the driver of the ransom car.

McKenna and Meyer described the scene that followed in which Banghart and Connors fled from police squads amid machine gun fire, abandoning their car in a woods. Banghart, as the previous witnesses disclosed, escaped with the aid of Landall.

How Connors got through the police lines has never been learned. He is still a fugitive, practically the only member of the Touhy gang who has not been apprehended. Banghart was captured on Feb. 11 in Baltimore with Isaac Costner, another Touhy gangster, who on Monday turned state's evidence at the trial.

Policemen McKenna and Meyer testified that the license number on the car used by Banghart and Connors in the second ransom attempt was 1-249-173, Illinois, 1933.

The last witness put on by the state was George Hansen of Forest Park, who told of receiving a letter for Connors containing the license registration card bearing that number. The letter was addressed to a roadhouse at 7427 Roosevelt road, Forest Park, where Hansen worked. Connors, known then as Eugene Crotty, presumably got the card later, although that fact could not be proved by the state.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley then rested his case. The many state exhibits, including the four loaded pistols and rifle seized when the Touhys were arrested in Elkhorn, Wis., a week after Factor's release, were admitted into evidence.

FACTOR ON THE STAND

Factor's story was the other main feature of the day. Called to the stand at the morning session, he gave his testimony rapidly as one who knew it well. Whereas his direct testimony at the first trial had occupied several hours, his evidence for the prosecution yesterday required only 26 minutes. His cross-examination by Defense Attorney Stewart took slightly longer.

Prosecutor Crowley explained the comparative brevity of Factor's testimony by pointing out that much circumstantial evidence had been necessary at the former trial which could be dispensed with at this one because of the confessions of Costner and of W. A. (Buck) Henrichsen, another Touhy gangster who testified for the state on Tuesday.

"I left the Dells roadhouse in Morton Grove about 1 a. m. on the morning of July 1," said Factor. "I was in my roadster, between my son, Jerome, and my friend, A. L. Epstein. As we left I saw a car parked on Dempster street start up after us. This car shoved us into the curb about a block east of the Dells and another car also drove up.

Story of the Kidnaping.

"Men with guns jumped out. I was told to get out, and I did. Two men took me and put me in the back seat of an automobile and put Epstein in the front seat. The men in back put my head down and later bandaged my eyes with my handkerchief. After a few minutes' drive Epstein was put out.

"They took me to the house which I later knew was the Glenview house [at Fern and Elm streets, Glenview]. They put me in the basement."

Pausing for a moment, Factor seemed to recall that he had omitted much of his previous testimony.

"If I can go back a minute I want to say that in the car one of the men in the back seat told me I would have to pay a ransom of $500,000," he resumed. "I said that was impossible. In the basement I was told that my brains would be blown out if I didn't get the money. They also asked me for the names of some of my friends who might be able to pay ransom if kidnaped."

Identifies Defendant Kator.

Factor's identification of Kator was made without any of the drama which accompanied the scene at the first trial.

"I complained that the bandage over my eyes was too tight," said Factor. "They removed it, and when it was taken off I looked up and saw Kator."

"Do you see him now?" queried Prosecutor Crowley.

Factor climbed down from the stand walked over to the defense table, and pointed a steady finger at Kator, who smiled scornfully.

"The next night [July 2] I was put in another automobile and driven about an hour to another place where I was kept on the second floor for the next eleven days," said Factor. [This was the "kidnap farm," the location of which is still being sought.]

Quickly, without interruption and leaving out many of the details which colored his story before, Factor told of the long days of his captivity. He mentioned Costner as the "guard who was good to me."

Sees Costner in Baltimore.

"You didn't know him then as Costner, did you?" interrupted Crowley.

"No, but I saw him when he was arrested in Baltimore," explained Factor.

He described the writing of the ransom letter upon the eighth day of his captivity and came to the identification of Touhy.

"They took off my bandages and I began to write," he said, "when suddenly a machine gun was poked into the back of my neck and I was startled and looked up. I saw a man holding up what looked like a blanket."

"Do you see that man now?" asked the prosecutor.

Again Factor descended from the stand and pointed at Touhy, who, expressionless, regarded the witness steadily.

This identification recalled to Factor that he had not yet identified Schaefer, whom he had pointed out first at the former trial.

Factor Points Out Kator.

"Going back to the kidnaping near the Dells," he said, "I saw a man there. It was that man." He pointed to Schaefer.

Factor said that he had recognized Banghart in Baltimore as one of the more vicious of the kidnapers, the one who had kicked him in the stomach and who had said to him:

"What are you praying to God for? Your life belongs to me."

The witness concluded his direct story by identifying a picture of Willie Sharkey, now dead, as that of one of the men on the kidnaping scene who had held a machine gun.

"You are awaiting extradition to England, are you not?" Prosecutor Crowley then inquired.

"The charge against me there is receiving money knowing the same to be fraudulently obtained," replied Factor. "It's not a crime in Illinois."

"How much money are you charged with obtaining?"

"About 458,000 English pounds [approximately $2,300,000]. I've already paid $1,300,000 in settlements."

DELAY M'FADDEN'S EXTRADITION WITH PETITION FOR WRIT

Petition for a writ of habeas corpus to prevent the removal of Edward [Father Tom] McFadden, Touhy gangster, to Elkhorn, Wis., was filed yesterday with Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan in the Criminal court. The case was assigned to Judge George Fred Rush and hearing set for Friday.

Earlier in the day Judge Frederick W. Elliott in the Municipal court ordered McFadden sent to Elkhorn to stand trial on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. McFadden was dismissed by the state as a defendant in the first trial of the Touhy gangsters for the kidnaping of John Factor.

Seized as he left the Criminal Court building, McFadden was held on the Wisconsin charge growing out of his arrest last summer with other Touhy gangsters near Elkhorn. Yesterday Judge Rush indicated that he would set bond of $25,000. Attorneys for McFadden announced they would argue for a bond reduction. Their client was returned to the county jail.

QUESTIONED BY STEWART

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney Stewart, Factor was subjected to the same personal attack which had been made upon him at the first trial. After reviewing again the speculator's difficulties in England, Stewart asked:

"You used to be called Jake the Barber, didn't you?"

The witness was not required to answer, a state objection being sustained by Judge Feinberg.

"Well, you used to be a barber, didn't you?" Stewart persisted.

Raises Eyesight Issue.

Stewart sought to make the witness confess that he had only a "fleeting glance" at Touhy during his captivity and that his eyesight had been faulty because his eyes had been bandaged for a long time. Factor insisted that he had seen Touhy clearly.

"You speak of recognizing Banghart," the lawyer remarked. "You identified him from his voice?"

"Not only his voice," replied Factor. "I recognized him as one of the kidnapers on the scene with Schaefer and Sharkey."

For awhile Attorney Stewart's line of questioning indicated that he might ask Factor to identify the voices of the defendants while he was blindfolded. Although Stewart permitted the witness to leave the stand without asking for this test, courtroom rumor was that he might recall Factor for some such purpose during the presentation of defense evidence.

"I welcome such a test," said Factor outside the courtroom. "I could identify the voices of those men blindfolded."

Touhy Home Guard Testifies.

Another witness at the morning session was Eddie Schwabauer, night guard at the Roger Touhy home north of Des Plaines, who said he did not see Touhy at home the night of June 30 or the morning of July 1. A woman alibi witness at the first trial testified that she, Mrs. Touhy, and Roger Touhy sat on the front porch of the Touhy home from 11 p. m. on June 30 to 4 a. m. on July 1.

Mrs. Clara Szech, housekeeper at the Glenview headquarters of the Touhy gang until the day that Factor was put there, was called as a court's witness because she had retracted her identification of Roger Touhy as one of the men she had seen about the Glenview house before the kidnaping. She said she had been mistaken as to her identification of Touhy at the first trial. However, she named Kator, Sharkey, and others of the Touhy gang as having frequented the house.

Thomas P. Roberts, receiver for the West Town State bank, corroborated Costner's testimony of Monday that he had rented a safe deposit box at the bank on July 15. Costner testified that he put his $2,400 share of the ransom money in the box.

Mrs. Aline Kemper, manager of the Washington Pines hotel, 5501 Washington boulevard, also corroborated one portion of Costner's testimony. She identified Banghart as a guest at the hotel in July after the Factor ransom had been paid.

Woman Pal of Gang Held.

Mae Blalock, alias Mae Davis, who was arrested with Banghart and Costner in Baltimore and returned with them to Chicago, was held in bonds of $10,000 yesterday by United States Commissioner Walker pending a hearing next Wednesday on a warrant for her removal to Charlotte, N. C. She is charged with possessing part of the $105,000 taken in a mail truck robbery in Charlotte last November. Banghart, Costner, and Connors are under indictment in Charlotte for the robbery.

ST. PAUL MAYOR ASKS CUMMINGS TO APPEAR AT INQUIRY ON CRIME

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Subpenaing of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings to testify before a Ramsey county grand jury regarding alleged crime conditions here was sought today by Mayor William Mahoney of St. Paul. The grand jury will meet Monday.

Cummings was named on a list of twelve persons which the mayor said he would give to County Attorney Michael F. Kinkead with the request that they be asked to appear before the county grand jury.

Kinkead said he would issue no subpenas until after he had conferred with William Burrows, the grand jury foreman.

The mayor's action followed a statement by the attorney general last week that St. Paul and Minneapolis were "breeding grounds of crime." Mayor Mahoney telegraphed to Cummings demanding that he amplify his charges, but no answer has been made beyond the attorney general's assertion that he "meant what he said."

As the mayor made his announcement today it was pointed out that legal obstacles probably would prevent the subpenaing of Cummings and other national officials.

U. S. GRAND JURY INDICTS PATLAK ON FRAUD CHARGE

Attorney David Y. Patlak, who was adjudged insane in a state court and committed to the Illinois Security home at Menard, was indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to defraud small home owners by claims of political influence. Also named in the indictment, which was returned before Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan, was Anthony DeVoney, a former employé in Patlak's office.

Patlak and DeVoney are alleged to have obtained sums variously estimated from $13,000 to $160,000 by assuring clients that they could aid in obtaining loans from the federal Home Owners Loan corporation. In case he is found to be sane in the future Patlak will face trial on the federal charge. DeVoney has not been apprehended.

Patlak was indicted on charges of operating a confidence game in the state court. He was found insane by a jury and ordered to the Menard institution by Judge Michael Feinberg.

BUDGET 'WITHIN MEANS' PASSED FOR WEST PARKS

$1,756,000 Expenditures Approved.

West park commissioners yesterday passed an economy budget of $1,756,298 for the fiscal year starting March 1. In previous administrations the annual expenditures for operation and maintenance of the west park system ranged around $3,200,000.

President Harry Joseph said the board will live within its means, and intends to save about 10 per cent of the amount appropriated. Controler Edward N. Heinz informed the commissioners that whereas last July they made an appropriation of $1,800,000 to be spent during the next eight months, the outgo of money for the full year the present board has been in charge has only exceeded that eight month appropriation by $25,000.

Tax Valuation Cut.

The tax valuation of property in the west park district has been reduced to 533 million dollars, Controler Heinz declared, and the highest rate permitted the west park board is 33 cents on each $100 valuation. Therefore the tax revenue for the year 1934 at most can be $1,758,900.

In asking that amount the board had in mind the expectancy of collecting only 90 per cent, the other 10 per cent being the estimate for loss and cost of collections. To get the 90 per cent the board must ask the county clerk to levy the full 33 cent rate against the full valuation of 533 million dollars, Controler Heinz explained.

In order that there be no danger of being disappointed in the amount collected, or of having arranged to spend more than will be received, the sum of $158,561 was set up in the budget as a reserve for contingencies with no expectation of using any of that sum, the controler said.

Expenses by Departments.

The setup for the money expected to be spent, by departments, was as follows:

Administration	$ 105,647
Civil service	19,330
Law	9,455
Police	421,280
Operation, including technical departments	633,321
Horticultural	199,130
Recreation	209,585
Total	$1,597,737

A saving of $84,000 was said to be in sight through making the maintenance division a section which includes the operation of the horticultural and landscaping departments as well as keeping the parks and boulevards clean.

BOWMAN EMPLOYE CONFESSES TO PLOT AGAINST A RIVAL

Edward J. Oenning, 35 years old, 4931 North Oakley avenue, an assistant foreman employed by the Bowman Dairy company, confessed yesterday that he and two other Bowman employés set fire early Tuesday to the cut rate milk depot sponsored by Meadowmoor Dairies, Inc., at 3300½ Southport avenue. Several families living in the two story building were driven to the street by the flames, which caused $3,000 damage.

Oenning named as his accomplices Thomas Fitzpatrick, 2857 Lincoln avenue, and Joseph Kennedy, whose address Oenning said he did not know. Fitzpatrick was arrested and police were searching for Kennedy. Both are drivers for the Bowman company.

Oenning told Assistant State's Attorney Frank E. Donoghue that after the cut rate store opened there had been a sharp decline in Bowman business in the district served by drivers from the office at Berteau and Ravenswood avenues. One route was practically wiped out, he said.

Fitzpatrick urged him and Kennedy to help put the place out of business, Oenning said, and after taking several drinks the trio purchased two gallons of gasoline, threw it into the basement, ignited it, and fled. Oenning was arrested when witnesses noted the license plate on his automobile.

La Guardia Makes Plea for RFC Assistance to New York

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Fiorello H. La Guardia, fiery mayor of New York, today laid bare the desperate financial plight of his city's government in an appeal for federal assistance through the RFC.

Appearing before a subcommittee of the house banking and currency committee to advocate legislation authorizing the RFC to grant loans to municipalities, the former radical congressman declared that the municipal government of New York, together with many other city governments, is fighting for existence with its back to the wall.

Unless the federal government steps in with cash advances to cities throughout the country, Mr. La Guardia declared, the entire system of municipal government in this country is doomed.

"Making full allowance for inefficiency and extravagance in city expenditures," he said, "the situation brought on by the depression is such as to put every municipality in the country right against the wall.

Can't Sell Securities.

"There is no market now for city securities," he added, "and speeches cannot make a market. Nor, I have learned, can a mandamus of court."

Mr. La Guardia's appearance before the committee created considerable stir among his former colleagues in the house. There was a great deal of handshaking and congratulation on his successful campaign for the New York mayoralty and later in the day he received a lengthy ovation on the floor of the house when he burst suddenly through the doors and into the midst of his congressional friends.

But his testimony before the committee reflected the grimness of his city's condition. He failed to go into detail concerning New York's bonded indebtedness, its operating expenditures and other financial items, but proceeded with a recital in general terms that nevertheless disclosed the serious position into which twelve years of Tammany rule has plunged the city.

Others Urge Assistance.

Following him to the stand were Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans and Paul Betters of Chicago, secretary of the United States Conference of Mayors, both of whom urged immediate action on the proposed legislation to aid city governments.

Mayor La Guardia said that the agreement which his Tammanyite predecessor entered into with New York bankers was hampering his efforts to balance the city's budget. The agreement, he said, should be wiped out at once, but he declared his intention of "trying to live up to every commitment of my predecessors."

"I ask this committee and congress on bended knee," he added, however, "to reduce the interest rate."

Under the Tammany agreement with the banks in New York, La Guardia explained, the city is paying from 4½ to 6 per cent interest. He asked that this be lowered to 3 per cent.

TRAYLOR LEAVES $400,000 HELD IN TRUST TO WIDOW

Value of Estate Excludes Insurance.

The will of Melvin A. Traylor, late president of the First National bank, disposing of an estate valued at $400,000, exclusive of insurance, was filed yesterday with Clerk Mitchell C. Robin in the Probate court. The bulk of the estate is left in trust to Mr. Traylor's widow, Dorothy Y. Traylor.

Trust officials of the bank, which is appointed executor and trustee under the will, gave the unofficial estimate of the estate at $400,000. They said the major portion of the estate is in stock of the bank.

Income Goes to Widow.

After listing outright bequests totaling $5,000 to two brothers and a sister and other relatives, the will sets up the balance of the estate in trust. The income from this trust fund goes to the widow during her lifetime. The will provides, however, that if Mrs. Traylor remarries, the trust income shall be divided equally between Mr. Traylor's children, Melvin Jr., 18 years old, and Nancy, 19.

In addition to the income she draws from the estate, Mrs. Traylor is empowered to draw from the principal for her needs with the consent of the bank. On Mrs. Traylor's death, according to the will, the trust income is divided into two equal parts for the benefit of the children.

When the son, Melvin Jr., reaches the age of 25 [or a later age, depending on the time of his mother's death] he will receive half of the principal of the trust created for him. He will receive the other half of the principal when he reaches 30.

$10,000 Wedding Gift.

Nancy Traylor will never receive the principal of her trust, but can use only the income during her lifetime. When she marries she will get an outright bequest of $10,000 from the principal if she makes a request in writing to the trustee for this sum. On the death of the daughter the income from her trust fund will be divided equally among her children. This trust will end and the principal will be divided among her children when the youngest child has reached the age of 21.

In the event Melvin A. Traylor Jr. dies before coming into his share of the estate the trust income will be divided among his children, if any. If neither the daughter nor son has any children the trustee is directed to distribute $50,000 equally among Mr. Traylor's brothers and sisters and their descendants, and to hold the remainder of the estate in trust, with the income going to Northwestern university for professors and instructors' salaries and for such scholarships as the university shall determine.

The will directs that all of Mr. Traylor's personal and household effects, including his automobile and his home at 426 Barry avenue, go to his widow. The bequests to other members of his family are: $1,000 each to two brothers, M. M. Traylor of Malone, Tex., and George T. Traylor of Lockney, Tex.; $1,000 to a sister, Mrs. A. B. Brown of Lockney, Tex.; $1,000 to the children of his deceased sister, Mrs. H. F. Bybee, and $1,000 to a sister-in-law, Mrs. Hester Traylor of West Point, Miss.

Will Executed in 1925.

The eight page will was executed on July 8, 1925, and a two page codicil was added on Sept. 21, 1929. The codicil revised the will by bequeathing the $1,000 to Mrs. Hester Traylor instead of her husband, M. E. Traylor, who was another of Mr. Traylor's brothers. The codicil also created a trust fund to yield an income of $600 a year to Mr. Traylor's father-in-law, J. Y. Yerby of Temple, Tex.

Shortly after his death associates of Mr. Traylor disclosed that his immediate family will also be the beneficiaries of life insurance policies certain to aggregate more than three-quarters of a million dollars and reported to be close to a million. The exact amount of Mr. Traylor's estate, exclusive of the insurance, will not be determined until an inventory is filed several months hence.

Mr. Traylor was 55 years old. He died at his home Feb. 14 after being ill of pneumonia for thirty-five days.

Kay Francis Is Granted Divorce

KAY FRANCIS AND KENNETH M'KENNA.

Charge Is Cruelty

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—An interlocutory decree of divorce against Kenneth McKenna, director and actor, was granted today to Kay Francis, cinema actress, on a charge of cruelty, the brown eyed star testifying that her husband had constantly complained because it was sometimes necessary for her to return home from work late at night. Her maid, Ida Perry, upheld this charge and told the court that the actress' husband assumed an air of superiority toward her.

The case was listed as Katherine Gibbs Mielziner vs. Leon Mielziner Jr., the couple's real names. McKenna was the 30 year old star's third husband. She was married previously to William Gaston and J. Dwight Francis.

Despite the reputation Miss Francis holds as being one of the best dressed stars on the screen, she testified today that her husband, among other things, had found fault with her manner of dressing. He also criticized her work in the films, she said.

101 STRANDED IN ARCTIC PERILED BY BREAKING ICE

MOSCOW, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Cut off from rescue by storm conditions on a bleak ice field in Bering strait, 101 survivors of the sunken steamer Chelluskin were reported tonight in grave danger of perishing on a drifting and breaking ice floe.

Among them are eight women and two small children. They have been marooned on the ice for the last nine days. Although plentifully supplied with food, the breaking up of the ice field and its northward drift in front of a high wind made their rescue doubtful.

The stranded party comprises Prof. Otto Schmidt's Wrangel island scientific expedition. Their steamer, the Chelluskin, was caught in the ice while returning from the island and sank on Feb. 13. Messages are being sent out by Prof. Schmidt through an improvises radio station.

INSULL PREPARES TO QUIT GREECE, ATHENS REPORTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Feb. 21.—Although government circles still maintain that Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities promoter, will be deported from Greece on schedule, which should mean within 10 days, it was learned tonight that the old man has not yet been told his stay will be terminated.

However, significant evidences of Insull's imminent departure are visible. There is good reason for believing that he has come to the conclusion that he must leave Greece.

Athens is intrigued tonight over reports that Insull is going eastward, possibly to Persia.

Willett Tells How His Wife's Penthouse Garden Caused Rift in Marital Affairs

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Howard L. Willett, head of a trucking company bearing his name, took the witness stand before Judge Rudolph F. Desort in the Superior court yesterday in opposing the plea of his wife, Mrs. Grace Williamson Willett, for $25,000 a year temporary alimony. Willett told the court that his wife's insistence on building a pink Mexican roof garden atop the apartment building at 2130 Lincoln Park west where they lived in a penthouse, when the stock market was in a "whirlwind spin downwards" in 1932, caused a rift between them.

The temporary alimony hearing probably will be concluded next Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Willett contends that the $912 a month given her by Willett since he departed from the penthouse home on Jan. 6, 1933, is insufficient for her needs. Her suit for separate maintenance, charging desertion, is impending. She also is the plaintiff in a pending million dollar alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Mary Cave Hall, wealthy widow of 5490 South Shore drive.

Protests Against Garden.

In the spring and summer of 1932 the building of the roof garden was in progress, Willett testified under questioning by his attorney, Jay Fred Reeve. He protested, he said, but the building continued. On Sept. 4, 1932, the date given by Mrs. Willett as that on which her husband offered to set up a trust fund from which she would get $23,000 a year in income, she told him she wanted a divorce, Willett testified.

After telling how since the crash of 1929 he had "taken actual losses of about $300,000, with another $100,000 loss due," and declaring that in the spring and summer of 1932 he was in danger of being sold out, as all his marketable stocks were posted as collateral for a $240,000 loan at the Continental Illinois bank, Willett was asked about the garden.

ATTORNEY REEVE—Now it was about this time when you say the loan at the bank was "terribly dangerous"; that certain things began to happen up on your roof at 2130 Lincoln Park West, was it not? A.—It was.

Q.—I've heard it said you wanted something built up there which would take the place of a summer home (alluding to Mrs. Willett's testimony). Is that true? A.—I didn't want anything except to run my business, to pay back that loan, and try to get a little sleep at night. I thought of nothing else.

Q.—Now this thing that was built on your roof—you didn't request that it be built, then? A.—I certainly did not.

Discussions of Finances.

Q.—Did you make any protests? A.—I certainly did. (Mrs. Willet had testified that he was enthusiastic over the garden.)

Q.—Did you discuss your financial affairs with Mrs. Willett? A.—Too many times, yes.

Q.—Do you remember how much that thing cost to build—by the way, what is it, anyway? A.—(With quiet intensity) Mrs. Willett describes it as a Mexican garden.

Q.—How much did it cost? A.—I wasn't supposed to pay anything for it, according to the arrangement. She was to pay for it partly out of the sale of some stocks and bonds and then was to charge $1 admission to it.

At this point Mrs. Willett, a small, slim woman, dressed in a spring costume which included a navy blue felt hat with a red and white feather, a shape similar to the traditional Robin Hood hat, and a navy blue suit with white collar and cuffs of youthful design, sat forward with increased interest in her chair at the attorneys' table. The color mounted in her carefully made up cheeks. In her testimony about the garden she had described the philanthropical benefits she allowed to be given there, but had made no mention of any plan to charge admission.

ATTORNEY REEVE: You mean she planned the garden to be a source of income? A.—People were supposed to pay a dollar and come in and look around. You see, Mrs. Willett thought she should have a profession. It was to be that of a roof "gardener," if you please. The garden would show what she could do, and she would then design other people's gardens.

He Describes the Garden.

Willett, a ruggedly built man with graying hair, blue eyes, a determined chin and a face marked with lines, in contrast to his wife's, added that his wife's chosen profession as "gardener" had been expensive, that he had paid out $3,000 on the roof garden. He described the garden:

"It's too windy up there to have any real vines or such things. Also it's too dry. And the incinerator was a problem, as it was apt to blow up paper and stuff which would then descend on the heads of guests."

Attorney Reeve's first questions directed at his client concerned his early history as a business man. He testified that he was 49 years old, was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1906, and then went to work for his father, A. T. Willett, who was in the teaming business. He and his brother, Walter, [who died in 1931] used to get down to work at the stables at 5:15 a. m. each day. For convenience they always lived near the stables, he said.

A "Truck Horse Job" Now.

Q.—What kind of job has yours been? A.—In the early years it was hard. In the gay twenties, it was pretty easy. Then my brother died in 1931, and since then I've been president of the Willett Motor Coach company, the holding company, and of the Willett company. I've been a regular truck horse since that time.

Mr. Willett recalled that in 1930, "about the time Mrs. Willett returned from Europe with the children [Howard L. Jr., who is employed by his father, and their daughter, Jane, now Mrs. Samuel Gale Taylor III.]" he had net assets worth $800,000, including the penthouse and its furnishings, which totaled $100,000, he said. His salary now is $29,500 annually from both companies.

Willett testified that "on the very day Mrs. Willett asked me for a divorce," he sent $150 to her brother, C. J. Williamson, and that previously he had sent him $30 a month, and twice had set him up in business at a total outlay of $4,500, which was not repaid. Prior to that date, he said, Mrs. Willett had employed lawyers in connection with divorce proceedings, which he did not learn at the time. He even took one of them to dinner at the Tavern club. This lawyer, he said, was N. W. McChesney, who later sent Mrs. Willett a bill for $3,300 for legal services.

Attorney Bennison F. Bartel was another attorney the wife had consulted before their separation took place and who negotiated with Willett about a divorce, the witness testified. It was not brought out in the testimony that Bartel represented Mrs. Willett in the alienation of affections suit. Bartel had declared that Mrs. Willett "wanted $40,000 a year," Mr. Willett said.

Accountant Is a Witness.

After Mr. Willett had testified, Attorney Benjamin B. Davis of the law firm of Socrates, Davis and Cohen, counsel for Mrs. Willett, question ! another witness, J. Charles Hirsch, an accountant, of 500 Melrose street. He testified that he had examined Willett's books with his consent. Willett deposited in his own personal bank account the following sums in five years, he said: 1929, $344,174.33; 1930, $768,244.61; 1931, $385,680.87; 1932, $81,760.81, and 1933, $77,718.48.

Asked by Attorney Davis what a check to Sol F. Goldman represented, Mr. Willett replied: "I don't remember him. But it sounds like a bootlegger."

JUDGE DESORT: You had many of them? A.—Yes, your honor, in 1933 I spent more for liquor than I ever did before in my life. That's one thing a man can give another man—a drink.

Another check for $1,500 represented the sympathy he had felt for the theme of a play, "Dangerous Corners," he said.

Mr. Willett bought many tickets to the play, giving them away in large numbers, and even sending some to Mrs. Willett, he asserted.

JUDGE DESORT: Was the theme murder?

MR. WILLETT: No, the theme was 'let sleeping dogs lie.'"

IL DUCE LINES UP AUSTRO-HUNGARY IN NEW ENTENTE

Envoy Reaches Budapest; Seeks Rome Parley.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 21.—Premier Mussolini's political maneuvers in central Europe were continued here today with the arrival of his right hand man, Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary of state, for a three day conference with Premier Julius Goemboes.

Indications are that the main object of Suvich's visit is to smooth the way for a conference between Mussolini, Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria and Goemboes in Rome toward the middle of March to lay the foundations, if possible, for a politico-economic bloc.

Fights Little Entente.

This is part of Mussolini's scheme to resist the little entente—Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia—and the new Balkan league—Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia—both of which he highly disapproves.

Suvich's visit here follows his visit to Vienna in January at which time he advised Dollfuss to clean his house of Socialists. Suvich today discussed economic matters with Goemboes, and in particular plans proposed by Italy two years ago to meet the Danubian economic crisis. These plans now have the backing of the French, it is claimed.

The parley will also have as a background a new proposal to increase Austria's army from 30,000 to 60,000 men and so strengthen Austria as a bulwark against further expansion of Nazi Germany to the south.

Dollfuss Begins Propaganda.

VIENNA, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss took his first practical step today toward organizing a new life for the Austrian working class by placing the director of the official news agency in charge of the seized Socialist party publishing house.

Through the former official Socialist organ, the Arbeiter Zeitung, which was remodeled in conformity with the spirit of the new times, the government will endeavor to make it clear to workers that "the government's Christian conviction makes it as a matter of principle the friend and protector of the working class."

The distribution of the government's newspaper for workers is scheduled to begin next week as soon as its Socialist personnel—who have fled or were killed or imprisoned in last week's civil war—can be replaced.

Socialists Join Nazis.

Despite a vigorous campaign to win working class sympathies over to the government, Nazi leaders insisted today that embittered Socialists are flocking into the Hitlerite ranks.

Some Socialists privately substantiated this claim, but since conversations with them are becoming difficult and fugitive Socialist leaders abroad seem to disagree on the extent of the drift to the Nazi camp it was hard to form an accurate estimate of the number of Socialists involved.

The government commissariat for propaganda, on the other hand, said large numbers of Socialists were welcoming "the release from party tyranny" and were enthusiastically entering government ranks.

Meanwhile the lifting of martial law in the Vienna district was taken as an indication that the government feels certain of its ground in the many sided political picture, which includes also a Nazi ultimatum that party members be given government positions soon.

Swiss Refuse to Aid Invasion.

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Should France or Italy seek to send troops to Austria to aid the Dollfuss government, they would be refused passage through Switzerland, the government today made clear.

Troops of foreign powers, no matter under what circumstances, it was announced, would not be granted permission to cross Swiss territory.

The question was raised in various newspapers, following the declaration by Italy, France and Great Britain warning Germany that Austrian independence must be preserved. No government has raised the issue, authorities said.

Bomb Shatters Cut Rate Milk Store in Lombard

The front windows and the rear wall of a cut rate milk store at 19 South Park avenue, Lombard, were shattered last night by the explosion of a bomb. The damage was estimated at $400 to $500. Robert Robinson of Des Plaines, manager of the store, said he had received no threats. Witnesses told the Lombard police the bomb was tossed into the place by a man who was riding in a small automobile.

BRITAIN IS "DRY"; MAY BE FORCED TO RATION WATER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The British water famine, a result of the abnormally dry past summer and winter, is becoming more serious. Reports from all parts of the country tell of dried up rivers, exhausted reservoirs and empty wells.

While rural districts are most seriously affected, the shortage is now beginning to involve cities and towns. Manchester, with only 58 days' supply of water left, has been compelled to "lend" up to 8,000,000 gallons daily to even drier Liverpool. Both cities' supplies may soon be rationed.

Thirty-two thousand inhabitants of the town of Kettering are permitted water for drinking and cooking only. The supply is cut off at night. Despite these precautions, the reserves are dwindling rapidly and the town faces a complete stoppage.

In many country districts water is sold for 2 cents a pailful. Several villages in Cheshire have been dependent on carted water since June. The only water left at Baydon, Berkshire, is a tank supplied by rainwater from a church roof, which is now almost exhausted. The River Tang is dried up and the trout for which it is famous are dead.

The matter will be brought up in the house of commons tomorrow, when the government will be pressed to deal with the problem.

HITLER MOVES TO STOP CRITICISM OF NAZI CHURCH

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(AP)—A move by Chancellor Hitler to stop criticism from Protestants in other countries of the Nazi Unified Protestant church movement was seen today in the appointment of the Rev. Theodore Heckel as bishop of the new church office for foreign affairs.

Bishop Heckel's special duty will be to establish contact with foreign Protestant churches, some of whom have described the German movement as "heathenish."

His appointment was made by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, church circles reported, as a result of Hitler's demand that something be done to stop outside criticism of Nazi German Christians. The new bishop is a 40 year old Lutheran and was an officer during the world war.

14 DIE, 50 SHOT IN 2 HOUR BATTLE IN ARGENTINE CITY

Revolt Sweeps 3 Brothers Out as Dictators.

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 21.—The political control of Gov. Frederico Cantoni and his two brothers in San Juan province was broken today by rebels who wrested the government from them after a two hour battle. Dispatches indicate the uprising was aimed entirely at the provincial government and not at the federal government of Argentina. Gov. Cantoni was reported made a prisoner. His present whereabouts is unknown.

An undetermined number of persons were killed and injured in the revolt, which was led by Carlos Porto, a national senator. Among those reported killed were the chief of police and the president of the provisional department of labor. One report estimated 14 killed and 50 wounded.

Burn Legislative Edifice.

An official communique tonight said the federal government had ordered Gen. Juan Ramon Jones, commander of the 4th army division, at present in San Juan, to take charge of the provincial government and reëstablish order. The communique said the San Juan legislative edifice was burned.

Gov. Cantoni and his brothers, Senator Aldo and Deputy Elbio, have been the political bosses and leading property owners of the big province adjoining the Chilean border. So complete was their control that they weathered the national revolution in 1930, when Gen. Uriburu placed new officials in charge of every other province of the country.

One unconfirmed report tonight said Aldo Cantoni had been killed. The government here denied this.

Known as "Tragic Province."

San Juan is known as Argentina's "tragic province." Its records contain a long list of political assassinations. Since 1840 few governors of the province have died natural deaths. In 1841 Gov. Mariano Acha was besieged by armed forces. His political adversaries eventually surrendered when on the point of starvation and were summarily beheaded.

Acha's successor, Gen. Benavidez, governed San Juan seventeen years. He was finally assassinated in 1858. The federal government then appointed Col. Virasoro governor. He ruled one year, when he and his entire family were assassinated.

The next governor, Dr. Antonio Aberastain, was assassinated in 1861. In 1884 Gov. Augustin Gomez also was assasssinated. In 1921 Gov. Amable Jones was shot.

In the last decade the Cantoni brothers have ruled. Aldo Cantoni narrowly escaped assassination in 1926, when gunmen fired forty shots at him. He was unharmed.

SEE ARMS ACCORD IN HITLER'S CALL ON BRITISH ENVOY

Eden to Confer Next with Mussolini.

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Political circles believed tonight that a visit by Chancellor Adolf Hitler to the British embassy—his first since assuming office—presaged his acceptance of a British arms plan and an Anglo-German disarmament agreement. Accompanying the chancellor in "the friendly gesture" were Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, and Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and disarmament specialist who came here Monday from arms talks in Paris, conferred with Hitler, Von Neurath, and the British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, for about two hours. Afterward Capt. Eden asserted that "the day's conversations were very useful" and that he was "most optimistic" over prospects of achieving an arms agreement.

May Swing French.

The talks, he added, will continue until Friday, when he plans to go to Rome for further conversations with Italian statesmen. His talks in Paris were said by Berlin newspapers to have been fruitless, but now, official quarters indicated, Capt. Eden can claim German backing in his efforts to bring Great Britain, Germany, France, and Italy into line on an arms pact.

In effect the British plan contemplates giving Germany a measure of rearmament she demands while gradually reducing the forces of heavily armed states in order to achieve a virtual parity for a ten year period at least.

French leaders told Capt. Eden last week that they could no longer talk of rearmament—only disarmament. Some months ago France tentatively agreed to allow Germany an army of 200,000 effectives.

No Definite Figures.

Under the Versailles treaty Germany is limited to an army of 100,000. She demands 300,000 soldiers, fully equipped. The proposal of a German army of 200,000 was first made in a British draft disarmament convention a year ago.

The British government issued a revision of the draft convention—the subject of Capt. Eden's talks—which set forth no definite figures for Germany, but which said it should not be difficult to find an agreement between the two figures.

The British plan definitely sets out that military training outside the army should be prohibited and that armaments should be subject to a system of permanent and automatic supervision. The project contained several concessions designed to bring Germany back into the world disarmament conference she left last fall. These include giving the reich tanks up to 6 tons in weight and guns up to 155 mm. Germany would be permitted military aircraft at the end of two years unless all powers agree to abolish fighting planes.

FRENCH DEPUTIES ADOPT WAGE TAX FOR FOREIGNERS

PARIS, Feb. 21.—(AP)—A 10 per cent tax on foreigners' wages, estimated as affecting 2 million persons, was adopted by the chamber of deputies today.

Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, opposed the tax, saying the French foreign office considered it a form of discrimination incompatible with existing treaties.

Other opponents in the chamber contended that the tax would drive foreigners from France and arouse animosity in many countries.

Supporters, on the other hand, said employers would pay the tax to retain most of their foreign employés because of their special abilities.

The tax was abandoned by the chamber in December after the senate had rejected it on the grounds on which the finance minister based his opposition today. It was revived yesterday.

Although intended primarily to oust foreign labor, the tax is directed also at foreign professional men. The latter would be taxed 10 per cent of their professional income in addition to the usual income tax.

All foreign residents who have lived in France less than ten years would be affected by the tax.

In addition, one-fifth of payments due foreign authors and inventors from France would be delivered to the treasury as a guarantee that they would pay a special 12 per cent tax. This clause would apply even though they are not residents.

Meanwhile, Deputy Paul Bastid, who in 1932 voted in favor of payment of the French war dept to the United States, today was elected president of the foreign affairs commission of the chamber. He replaces in that position Edouard Herriot, now vice premier.

The cabinet of Premier Gaston Doumergue further strengthened its authority over the chamber today by winning a vote of confidence, 440 to 150.

BRUSSELS UNDER GUARD FOR KING'S FUNERAL TODAY

Fear Attempt on Lives of Visiting Royalty.

BY ANN SOMERS HOUSE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Picture on back page.)

BRUSSELS, Feb. 21.—Fear for the life of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, who in 1929 was shot at by an anti-Fascist in Brussels, dominates all preparations for tomorrow's funeral for King Albert.

A number of anti-Fascists were arrested today.

"All foreigners who at some time or other have uttered a menace against the life of some king, prince or chief of state will be placed behind closed doors for three or four days," an official said.

Humbert Arrives Secretly.

Humbert arrived here secretly by automobile this morning after having been met aboard his train by secret police officers at Arlon, in the province of Luxembourg. He left the Italian delegation's special train at Namur, where a limousine awaited him. On his way to Brussels he stopped at the spot where king Albert was killed in a fall from a cliff Saturday, and prayed.

In Brussels he first stopped at the Italian embassy, where he is officially staying. In reality he is at Laeken palace, a few miles from Brussels.

The chief fear is that Humbert might be attacked tomorrow during the funeral procession, in which he will walk behind Crown Prince Leopold and Prince Charles of Belgium from the Brussels palace to the cathedral of St. Gudule. Heavy police forces will be concentrated on this stretch of less than a mile.

Two Kings Withdraw.

From the cathedral to the royal family tomb at Laeken the entire procession will ride in automobiles and carriages.

Other princes will be less guarded, even the prince of Wales, who arrived with an official delegation in nine airplanes this afternoon.

King Boris of Bulgaria, however, is going to be solidly guarded, especially as he is expected to be the only king to attend the funeral. King Prajadhipok of Siam decided to send a nephew in his stead and King Christian of Denmark decided at the last minute not to come.

However, the king of music will be here in their stead—Ignace Jan Paderewski, who was a personal friend of King Albert.

Queen Elizabeth will not attend the funeral service in the cathedral because it is the custom for the widow in Belgium to stay home and go to a special church service which will be held two or three days after the funeral. Queen Elizabeth, moreover, is ill in bed with lumbago.

One hundred fifty thousand persons are estimated to have filed past the open coffin of King Albert in the last two days, during which the deceased king has lain in state in the Brussels royal palace. A delegation of blind war veterans paid tribute at their late commander's bier today.

Preparations have been completed for Crown Prince Leopold to ascend the throne Friday.

Thanks New Queen.

Official thanks to Princess Astrid, Leopold's Swedish wife, for having given birth to two children will be given in one curious sentence in the parliamentary reply to King Leopold's throne speech Friday. Princess Astrid is expecting a third child.

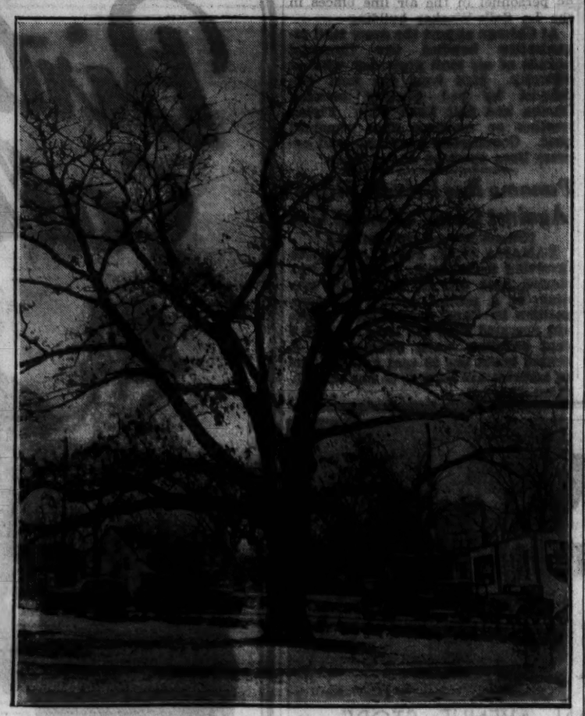
"The nation is particularly grateful to Queen Astrid for having insured the permanence of the dynasty," is the phrase.

The address to the king first outlines the merits of Leopold I., father of his country, and Leopold II., who enlarged Belgium by winning the Congo for it. Then it praises King Albert as the defender of his country and as a foremost soldier and statesman in peace. Then it recalls that the new king fought in the trenches and is an authority on colonial problems.

The reply then pays homage to Queen Astrid, and finally to Dowager Queen Elizabeth, "who was a mother in their mothers' stead to soldiers wounded in the war."

It ends by expressing parliament's confidence in the new king.

PLAN TO MOVE MONSTER TREE



Oak tree on a lot on 95th street just west of the Rock Island tracks, which will be moved if a building is erected as planned. It is estimated the tree is more than 100 years old. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

BUILDINGS CROWD ON FAMOUS OAK; PLAN TO MOVE IT

Hope to Save Great Tree for Beverly Hills.

"The Bur Oak of Beverly Hills," said to be the oldest and largest tree of its kind in Cook county, will not be destroyed when buildings are constructed on the lot on which it stands at 95th and Wood streets. It was learned yesterday that plans have been made to transplant the tree before ground is broken for the buildings this spring.

The tree, a landmark familiar to residents of the neighborhood and commuters who pass on the Rock Island suburban trains, is said to be 150 years old. It has a diameter of three feet at the base of the trunk, a branch spread of 80 feet, and is 75 or 80 feet high.

Transplanting Is Planned.

Plans were completed recently for construction of two combination store and apartment buildings at a total cost of $250,000 on the lot occupied by the tree. Because of protests against cutting it down Mrs. E. M. Mers, owner of the property, made plans for transplanting the tree. Sometime in the early spring workmen will lift it from the ground and shift it from the northwest to the southwest corner of the lot.

The contractor plans to move with the major roots a ball of earth 15 feet in diameter. The top of the tree is to be trimmed in an effort to compensate for the loss of many of the roots.

Doubt Tree Will Survive.

Tree surgeons yesterday expressed doubt that the tree would survive the transplanting. It was pointed out that the bur oak has roots equal in spread to its height. The main roots travel out for some distance before the important feeder roots branch off. Fear was expressed that the 15 foot ball of earth would not contain enough of these feeder roots to allow the tree to live.

Street Car Employes in Cleveland Win Wage Boost

Cleveland, O., Feb. 21.—(AP)—An arbitration board, named to decide a controversy between the Street Car Men's union and the Cleveland Railway company, today granted an increase of 8 cents an hour in the pay of the car employés. Nearly 3,000 men will be affected by the action, 2,200 of them trainmen. The present wage for motormen, conductors and bus operators is 57 cents an hour. The new scale, retroactive to Jan. 1, is 65 cents an hour.

Kills Self with Poison Bought 50 Years Ago

Denver, Colo., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Deputy Coroner George Bostwick said Joseph V. Benson, prominent Denver business man, committed suicide today with poison his father bought nearly 50 years ago. Bostwick said the poison was drunk in a glass of beer at a party while officers sought Benson with a warrant charging embezzlement from the defunct Centennial Loan and Finance company.

BOSTON BENEFACTORS OF TURKISH CHARITIES LEAVE FOR AMERICA

ISTANBUL, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Hundreds of human derelicts, refugees and unemployed, lost a "Lady Bountiful" and the dwindling American colony here lost two of its most prominent members today with the departure for Boston of Dr. and Mrs. George Huntington.

Dr. Huntington is vice president of Robert college. Mrs. Huntington, the daughter of Cleveland Dodge, has devoted her wealth during the last quarter of a century to charity work in Istanbul.

Ill health necessitates treatment for Dr. Huntington in a Boston clinic. He will return to Robert college if his health permits.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 21.—Miss Jeanne Vernier, a resident of Loriente, Lower California, suffered a heart attack yesterday, causing, apparently, immediate death. The doctors so certified.

But while the funeral cortège was on the way to the cemetery today, the "deceased" protested from her coffin. "Where are you taking me?" she inquired.

Miss Vernier, according to dispatches that will be published in the local press tomorrow, has fully recovered.

ROW ON OCEAN MAIL MENTIONS THE PRESIDENT

Brown Questioned Over Atterbury Case.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Democrats as well as Republicans can be counted on to distribute the spoils of federal labor, it appeared today at the senate special air mail committee hearing. There Walter F. Brown, President Hoover's postmaster general, occupied the witness chair for a third day of interrogation.

Something of a boomerang was let fly by Committee Chairman Hugo L. Black [Dem., Ala.] as he questioned the former Republican cabinet member concerning his haste to give an ocean mail contract to the Philadelphia Mail Steamship company before going out of office last March 4.

Cabinet Studies Situation.

While the committee was in session at the capitol, at the White House the President and his cabinet were reviewing the entire air mail situation at their regular weekly meeting. It was reported later that future action probably will depend upon new legislation. This was interpreted to mean that under new laws authorizing direct subsidies rather than postal contracts, the air mail operators whose contracts were canceled and who were outlawed as bidders for a five year period might be permitted to bid.

It was no one sided story that came out of the senate committee hearing, despite the revelations concerning hoped-for Democratic favors.

Shows Brown's Speculation.

Senator Black succeeded in showing that Mr. Brown had dealt in a joint stock account with a friend engaged in lobbying for government contracts; that the friend put up all the collateral and Mr. Brown none; that the former postmaster general lost heavily by the arrangement did not alter the principle, the senator intimated.

The high spot of the day, nevertheless, was provided by the documents dealing with the steamship contract. They were written by A. J. Ball, foreign freight agent, and Washington contact man for the Pennsylvania railroad, which was one of the interests backing the Philadelphia Steamship line. For Mr. Ball believed, it appeared, that the incoming Democrats could be counted on for favors as well as the outgoing Republicans.

Relies on Farley, Kermit.

In a letter to one J. L. Sysmans, written a month before parties changed places, Mr. Ball explained that Postmaster General Brown had said he would not want to start any negotiations that could not be cleaned up before March 4. Then the writer continued:

"We agreed with him as we feel we are close enough to Mr. Farley [present Democratic postmaster general], through Vincent Astor, to accomplish what we want. Kermit Roosevelt is away with Vincent Astor and the President elect on Mr. Astor's yacht, and we have wired a complete statement of facts to Mr. Kermit Roosevelt so that he can get in his good work as soon as possible."

That portion of the Ball correspondence, you may be sure, was not put into the public record, though other portions of the Ball papers were used freely by Chairman Black in his questioning of the witness.

Both Shipping Officials.

Kermit Roosevelt and Astor both are officials of the International Mercantile Marine company, which was interested in the steamship deal because it hoped to sell some rather ancient ships to the new company. The "good work" was to be accomplished while President Elect Roosevelt was on Mr. Astor's Nourmahal on the trip which ended with the assassination attempt at Miami.

Equally enlightening was another suppressed passage in a memorandum Ball wrote to C. B. Sudborough, general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania railroad, on March 3, 1933. Senator Black, even then probing ocean and air mail matters, and other Democratic senators had learned of the Philadelphia deal and were intent on stopping it.

Senator Black had proposed a resolution calling on the postmaster general to halt further proceedings and providing for an investigation.

Senator David A. Reed, [Rep., Pa.], intent on helping his constituents and the Republican party, on March 3 had held up the resolution long enough for the steamship bids to be opened.

Later the resolution was adopted. Mr. Ball reported as follows:

"We considered an investigation as called for in the resolution the most healthy method of clearing the atmosphere and would accomplish the point the Democrats were after, i. e., to distribute this patronage under Democratic administration. The Roosevelt-L. M. M. people [Roosevelt Steamship company and International Mercantile Marine] feel they are sufficiently strong with the new administration to secure prompt and favorable action on the bid."

The Philadelphia Mail Steamship line, Mr. Ball said, had been the victim of "rabid antagonism" on the part of the Democrats against the Republican party and the postmaster general in particular.

Mr. Brown on his part was not lacking in frankness in his discussion of the case. The Southgate-Nelson company had been operating vessels for the shipping board from Atlantic ports to Europe. When it proposed that the U. S. shipping board get rid of its boats, and that the routes be let on a postoffice contract with a subsidy attached, Mr. Brown said he thought the service had better be split between Southgate-Nelson and the Philadelphia Mail line. The latter was a proposed company backed by the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, and Reading railroads.

"And did you tell Mr. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania, that you were favorable to their getting a contract?" inquired Senator Black.

Feared Unfavorable Attitude.

"I said I would give it my personal attention," Mr. Brown said. "Mr. Atterbury was anxious to have it completed before the postoffice department and the government got under influences which might not be very favorable to doing anything for Philadelphia."

Senator Black referred to a passage in one of Ball's letters in which he reported Mr. Brown's wish that his part in the matter be kept secret. As an earlier witness, Ball had verified the statement.

"Was that correct?" demanded Senator Black.

"It was not," retorted Mr. Brown. "Nor were some of the other things he said under your skillful leading questions."

"You were not familiar with it, then?" asked the senator.

"No, but I am familiar with your skill," replied the witness.

Following adoption of the Black resolution, the shipping board failed to authorize the proposed sale of vessels to the Philadelphia Mail line, Mr. Brown did not sign the mail subsidy contract after all, and the deal failed.

Aircraft Head Denies Charge of Profiteering on U. S. Order

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—If the Pratt-Whitney Aeronautical company makes unusually large profits on airplane engines built for the navy, it makes them because of the company's efficiency in engine construction and development and not by profiteering at government expense.

This was the answer given today by Donald L. Brown, Pratt-Whitney president, to charges that his company has realized exorbitant amounts on plane motor contracts with the navy. Mr. Brown testified before the house naval affairs sub-committee, now investigating alleged excessive profits on aircraft built for the army and the navy by private manufacturers.

Adams Held Stock in Firm.

His appearance on the stand was preceded by that of J. H. Kindleberger, president of the Douglas Aircraft company, who revealed that Charles Francis Adams, when secretary of the navy under President Hoover, held 500 shares of stock in the Douglas concern. How the navy secretary obtained the stock, Mr. Kindleberger was unable to say and the committee announced its intention of looking into the matter at once.

Mr. Brown contested the navy audit which showed Pratt-Whitney made an average profit of 36 per cent on plane contracts during the last six years, asserting that the figure was not a net profit, since it failed to allow for the payment of federal taxes and the distribution of bonuses to company officials and employes during the boom days of '28 and '29. On the contrary, he declared, his company's net profit was only 23.8.

Year by year, since the company's organization late in 1925, Mr. Brown showed the committee his rate of profit. In 1926, the concern lost $53,197 on a navy contract of $57,053. In 1927, the profit made was 21.2 per cent; in 1928, 32 per cent; in 1929, 33.6 per cent; in 1930, 24.5 per cent; in 1931, 18.5 per cent; in 1932, 9.3 per cent, and last year, 5.5 per cent.

Makes Profit Despite Slashes.

The continued profit, Mr. Brown pointed out, has been realized in the face of almost regular slashes in the price of the two famous motors which his company manufactures. In 1926 he told the committee, the price of the 400 horse power, air cooled Wasp motor pioneered by Pratt-Whitney, was $15,000. Today it sells to the navy for $4,290. In 1927, the 525 horse power Hornet engine cost $8,750, while today it sells for $4,663.

The profits made by his company were due to three fundamental policies adopted when the Pratt-Whitney organization was started, Mr. Brown declared.

In the first place, his company resolved at the outset to concentrate all its engineering and experimental efforts on the development of military and transport engines. Secondly, the Pratt-Whitney plant was equipped only for the manufacture of certain parts and up to the present time, the company purchases many of its parts from other companies. And finally, the company maintains a strict system of inventory control.

COLLEGE TESTS TO SHOW IF HYPNOTISM IS AID TO EDUCATION

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Knowledge which could not be obtained otherwise without years of study may be acquired in a single semester if education by hypnotism tests to be tried this semester at the College of the City of New York are successful, Dr. Ralph B. Winn said tonight. Ten students will be used in the tests.

"Small gray balls will be suspended before the students' eyes," he said. "Only a few minutes will be required for their eyes to shut automatically.

"Yet they will not be asleep. They will be in a state of light hypnosis. When I begin to lecture in a slow even tone, I shall try to evoke vision after vision in the students' minds."

Students will be selected from volunteers of the psychology class. Lectures will be given five times a week at night. Dr. Winn is a member of the philosophy department.

AIR LINERS WILL COMPETE WITH P. O. DEPARTMENT

Offer Fast Commercial Express Service.

BY HUGH SEXTON.

As the army entered its third day of carrying the air mail yesterday the commercial lines, deprived of their mail contracts, set about to increase their air express business to make up for the loss of federal revenue. The country's two largest air lines, American Airways and United Air Lines, with headquarters in Chicago, expect their air express campaigns to cut into the volume of mail carried by the army flyers.

Before their contracts were canceled last Monday the commercial air lines, according to their officials, hesitated to expand their express business for fear it would interfere with the air mail. Now, with their government contracts gone, they are free to compete with the postoffice department for everything except first class mail.

See Merger of Systems.

The campaign to increase their air express business will lead to a merging of the two air express organizations now serving the country, according to air transport officials, in order to provide a unified and more efficient service. These systems are General Air Express and the air express division of the Railway Express agency.

General Air Express includes American Airways, Transcontinental and Western Air Lines, Eastern Air Transport, Pennsylvania Air Lines, and United States Airways. This system serves 115 cities and increased its business more than 200 per cent last year over 1932. During the last nine months of 1933 each month showed twice as much express carried as in the corresponding month of 1932.

The Railway Express Agency's air service includes United Air Lines, Western Air Express, National Parks Airways, Kohler Aviation corporation, and the Hanford Air Lines, which serve eighty cities. This system increased its air express business almost 200 per cent last year over 1932. Between 1926 and 1930 air express shipped in the United States grew from 6,467 pounds to 286,798 pounds a year, and in the three succeeding years grew from 885,164 pounds in 1931 to 1,660,000 pounds last year.

Seek More Passengers.

In conjunction with the campaign to increase air express shipments the air lines will try to expand their passenger business. However, air express will be the key note of their effort because it does not fluctuate in volume seasonably, as passenger traffic does. Appeals will be made to large insurance companies, banks, clearing houses, brokerage houses, and other businesses where time saving and low transportation rates are important.

The commercial air lines maintain that they can offer faster service with air express than the postoffice department can offer through air mail carried by the army. They also point to their low rates whereby a one pound package sent air mail from Chicago to New York costs $2.03, while one pound sent by air express costs $1. Previously these tariff differentials were not stressed.

The first step in the merging of the two air express systems was taken this week when an emergency arrangement was made between American Airways and United Air Lines whereby General Air express shipments are carried from New York to Cleveland by United and there transferred to American Airways' through express service to Los Angeles. The rate is split between the two systems. By this arrangement express leaving New York at 9:15 p. m. reaches Los Angeles at 3 p. m. the following day.

The campaign for air express was outlined yesterday at meetings of traffic personnel of American Airways in the Palmer house, which was addressed by Rogers M. Combs Jr., chairman of General Air Express, and at a meeting of United Air Lines traffic personnel in the air line offices in the La Salle-Wacker building.

At Chicago airport the army mail organization handled two thousand pounds of air mail yesterday without difficulty. Mail from the west was delayed by bad weather between Omaha and Salt Lake City. Flying weather on southern lines remained good. Commercial passenger and express lines operated on schedule.

RE-ENACT DEATH SCENE AT TRIAL OF DR. WYNEKOOP

Defendant Complains She Is Terribly Tired.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

The scene of Rheta Wynekoop's murder was spread once more in Criminal court yesterday as evidence began in the second trial of the young wife's mother-in-law, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, for her murder.

With an eerie squealing of its casters, the operating table on which Rheta was chloroformed and shot was trundled into Judge Harry B. Miller's courtroom with two bailiffs pushing hard on its squat black frame.

The defendant, 63 years old and pallid, bit her lips, swallowed hard, and lifted a shaking water glass to her lips as the bailiffs swung the death pallet before the jury. A moment later she murmured that she was "terribly tired."

Policeman on Stand.

The state's first witness, Arthur Marsh, a rosy cheeked young policeman, was on the stand. In a few preliminary questions it was established that he was cruising with squad No. 25 out of Fillmore station the night of last Nov. 21 when a radio report of a murder sped the squad to the foreboding Wynekoop home at 3406 West Monroe street.

Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty told him to state what he saw. The witness recalled being met on the porch of the manse by Miss Enid Hennessey, Dr. Wynekoop's school ma'am lodger, who, as developed at the last trial, was acting as official greeter for all callers at the residence that fateful night.

"It was 9:55 p. m. and a mild, clear evening when we arrived," the witness began with professional preciseness. "Miss Hennessey invited us in and led us downstairs to the operating room."

"Tell the jury what you saw," said the prosecutor.

"I saw the body of a young, auburn-haired woman, about 24 years old, lying on this operating table on her left side, covered with a blanket which was stained with blood from a wound we afterwards discovered was in her back. There was a pistol on the head rest of the table, the handle covered with gauze and a moist towel, held close to the mouth by the body's right hand."

Defendant's Eyes Close.

At recollection of the scene the witness was sketching Dr. Wynekoop's hazel eyes fluttered and closed. The prosecutor beckoned the witness to step down from the stand. The policeman pried open a bundle containing sundry blankets, pillows and blood-stained underthings. The defendant's large, white hand groped for her throat. She sighed.

"We object," proclaimed Defense Attorney Milton Smith, observing her distress. "Object to displaying these gruesome trappings here in court. They're not evidence."

Dr. Alice looked hopefully towards the bench, then glanced back to the wall where her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, and her son, Walker, had been sitting before the policeman took the stand. Their chairs were empty, the judge having ruled that they, with all other prospective defense witnesses, be excluded.

Court Overrules Objection.

"Objection overruled," said the bald, portly judge to Mr. Smith. "You should have objected before the table was brought in. It's too late now."

With no further prompting from the prosecutor, Policeman Marsh proceeded to "make up" Rheta's deathbed as he found it that night. He laid a leather and a linen pillow where her head had rested. He spread over a square hole in the fabric the piece of covering which the state had cut out to be examined for bloodstains.

He had completed his task with reference to the table and its coverings and was picking Rheta's shoes and underclothing out of the parcel when the clock hands touched 4:30 p. m. The judge cleared his throat, the bailiff rapped his gavel and court adjourned until tomorrow, it having been agreed to hold no session today —Washington's birthday.

"I'm so glad we'll have the holiday," Dr. Alice murmured when her son and daughter rejoined her. "Darlings, I have a fierce headache and I am so tired of it all."

Mother and daughter groped for each other's hands and played pitty-pat together until Dr. Alice was shifted to a wheel chair and wheeled away to the county jail.

THE OPENING STATEMENT

For an hour in the morning and for twice that long in the afternoon state and defense outlined their respective versions of the life and death of Rheta Wynekoop in opening statements to the jury.

With the same direct and dispassionate style he had used in the first trial Prosecutor Dougherty, in his opening statement, presented Rheta's situation as that of a loving but unwanted wife, whom her mother-in-law slew to satisfy her own need of money and her son's desire for freedom from a marriage tie. There was no violent gesturing, no shouting of words—just a quiet monotone. The statement required only one hour.

"The dead girl was married to the defendant's son, Earle," Dougherty began. "He had brought his bride home to live under the mother's roof. There was no happiness for Rheta there."

The prosecutor went on to sketch Earle's fumbling for a career, his one year attendance at medical school, his quitting there to spend three years in idleness, his employment as guard at A Century of Progress, and his waning interest in his wife as he philandered with the gayer and prettier girls he met at the Fair. Dr. Alice listened with eyes half closed.

"There was dissension between Earle and Rheta from the time he began working at the Fair," Dougherty stressed. "His mother knew of Earle's interest in other girls. He wasn't spending his nights at home. Dr. Wynekoop, of course, had an overweaning love for this, her youngest and her wayward son. Moreover, we think the evidence will show, she was in pressing need of funds."

Thus the prosecutor led up to Dr. Wynekoop's procuring of $12,000 insurance on Rheta without consulting the girl, her secret rendezvous with her son, after the neighbors had been told he was gone to Arizona, and his second departure for the west the day before Rheta died. He brought the chronology down to the evening of last Nov. 21, when an undertaker Dr. Wynekoop summoned found Rheta dead and notified the police.

Only Two Persons in House.

"The only persons in the house, aside from the dead, were Dr. Wynekoop and the school teacher, Enid Hennessey, who boarded there," Dougherty related.

"The first thing Miss Hennessey knew, Dr. Wynekoop told her Rheta was dead," said the prosecutor. "The hour was 9:30 p. m. Dr. Wynekoop calls her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, at the county hospital, and tells her to come home. Dr. Catherine doesn't want to come—she's busy with her duties. Dr. Alice says something terrible has happened, and Dr. Catherine says, 'Well, what?' Then Dr. Alice says, 'Rheta has been shot and is gone.' So Dr. Catherine comes hurrying home. The hour is 8:30 p. m."

The prosecutor briefly covered the calls mother and daughter made to two physicians to attend Rheta and related Dr. Alice's extraordinary conduct when the undertaker, Tom Ahearn, who had buried four of the Wynekoop dead before, arrived in response to her summons.

"There is no immediate reference to the dead," Dougherty reminded the jurors. "Instead Dr. Alice begins in a matter of fact manner to tell what she has been doing all day. She recites how she got up for breakfast, assisted at a morning operation on one of her patients, came home for lunch, told Rheta to go down town for music, went out shopping herself, and returned home to eat supper with Miss Hennessey."

The prosecutor effectively mimicked the undertaker's astonishment at this conduct:

"Well," says Ahearn, "what have you called me over here for?"

"Then Dr. Wynekoop got to the point of the story she dreaded to tell. She tells the undertaker Rheta is lying dead on the operating table in her consulting room. They go downstairs together, and the undertaker, perceiving blood issuing from Rheta's mouth, asks whether anything has been touched. No, Dr. Alice says, nothing has been touched. This, gentlemen, with reference to a body swathed in blankets, with a pistol wrapped in gauze and lying at the head of the table."

Police Are Notified.

The prosecutor recounted the undertaker's alarmed admonition that the police must be notified immediately and Dr. Wynekoop's alarmed response: "What! Notify the police!"

"So Ahearn notified the police," Dougherty went on. "They arrived and the subsequent investigation disclosed a bullet in her back, chloroform in her lungs and $12,000 insurance on her life, all in favor of Dr. Alice Wynekoop."

"Through the evidence I have outlined, the state expects to show this to have been a cold, premeditated murder, committed with malice aforethought. Gentlemen, that is all."

Attorney Smith's Statement.

Taking twice as long before the jury, gesturing, vehement and interspersing many statements to which the prosecutor objected as "argumentative," Defense Attorney W. W. Smith presented an entirely different biography for Rheta.

In his statement, the slain girl stood forth as neurotic, wilfull, half crazy at times and feigning epileptic fits to distress the Wynekoop household. Dr. Wynekoop, on the other hand, he described as a brilliant, whole souled woman, sorely misunderstood by the state, for she had been "the dearest, fondest friend the poor unfortunate Rheta ever had."

Getting down to the scene in the death chamber, he sketched a picture of the position of the body which seemed to convey the thought that the fondly loved Rheta, in a pique at her mother-in-law, lay down on the table, sniffed the chloroform, shot herself in the back and blanketed her body before she died. He did not directly mention suicide, but such was the suggestion in his stress on the chloroform soaked towel in the dead girl's hand.

SYMPHONY MEMBER ON WYNEKOOP JURY GIVEN HIS VIOLIN

Members of the Wynekoop jury will have more than the usual pinochle or poker games to help them pass the hours they are locked up outside the courtroom. One of their number is Rudolph Rous, a violinist with the Chicago Civic Symphony orchestra. Last evening Judge Harry B. Miller, who is hearing the case, gave him permission to have his violin after Rous had suggested that he could entertain his fellow jurors and at the same time keep up his practice. Judge Miller sent his personal bailif, Walter Koehler, to get the violin at Rous' lodgings. The instrument is a valuable one, having been made in 1736.

The Wynekoop jury was completed and sworn in shortly before 11 o'clock yesterday morning after a delay caused by the dismissal of a juryman who had become ill during the previous night.

COMMUNISTS AT LYNCH HEARING ROIL DIETERICH

Halts Proceedings Twice in Protest.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Senator William H. Dieterich [Dem., Ill.] today twice halted the senate judiciary subcommittee's hearing on the anti-lynching bill to force two communists, one a Negro, one a white, to leave the witness chair.

The first setto came when James W. Ford, colored communist candidate for Vice President in 1932, started a bitter denunciation of present economic conditions and began a sales talk for communism.

Senator Dieterich, white with rage, waved a fist in the air and growled: "This is not a political forum. This is a hearing on the lynching bill. What you are saying is merely to forward your communistic doctrine."

Continues to Talk.

Ford continued to talk. Again Mr. Dieterich interrupted to shout:

"I consider your remarks a reflection upon the law abiding colored people of my state and of the nation."

The fight grew more bitter, with Ford charging that he was being throttled; Dieterich demanded that the witness be withdrawn. Senator Van Nuys [Dem., Ind.], mild mannered chairman of the subcommittee, heeded the protest and withdrew the witness.

There was a peaceful interlude while a minister from Tennessee pleaded fervently for a federal law to punish mob violence.

Then Bernard L. Ades, white, a communist lawyer from Baltimore, came forward to make his speech. He, too, launched into an oration on the virtues of communism.

Senator Dieterich was furious by now. Again he declared that the injection of the communism issue in a hearing on lynching was an insult to "the decent colored people of my state" and of the nation.

Get Into Argument.

"Among all the decent Negroes in Illinois," said Dieterich, "there is not a single communist."

"That is extremely unfortunate," parried Ades.

Then the battle was on. In a moment or two Senator Van Nuys, with a sharp reprimand for Ades, removed him as a witness and added:

"Communistic propaganda finds no lodgment in the heart of any member of this committee."

Earlier in the day Attorney General William Preston Lane Jr. of Maryland gave his side of the story of the lynching last October of George Armwood, "eastern shore" Negro. Lane detailed his efforts to make the local authorities act; gave the committee the names of nine men positively identified, he declared, as members of the lynching mob, and confessed that "local opinion" on the eastern shore had prevented punishment of the men, even after the state authorities had recommended it, up to their full powers. Federal jurisdiction, as provided in the bill, is the only answer to such a local situation, he argued.

CAROLINA ASSEMBLY HOST TO NEGRO EXILED IN 'CARPETBAG' DAYS

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—"Senator" Green Coleman, bent and stooping with age, came back today to the legislative halls he was ordered to leave almost 60 years ago as a political exile—a "man without a state."

Coleman is a Charlotte, N. C., Negro who was elected to the South Carolina "carpetbag" legislature in 1874. He served until 1876, when Wade Hampton, riding the roads by night with his Red Shirts, "took over the state" as governor.

The senator's return today was a "triumphant entry" into the state from which he was banned. He was accompanied by a motorcade of prominent Charlotte business and professional men.

The general assembly met in joint session to receive the aged Negro.

After he was ordered from the state Coleman went to Charlotte, where he was given refuge. He worked as a commercial painter until the infirmities of age caused him to give up his calling. Recently he expressed a wish to return to Columbia before he died. He had never returned to South Carolina after his banishment.

PRICE OF MILK CUT 1 CENT FOR SALES BY PINT

The reduction from 10 to 9 cents a quart for milk delivered by Chicago dairies to the doorstep, which was announced yesterday by leading companies as effective tomorrow morning, will be accompanied also by a drop in the price of pints of milk.

Accepting the new scale for quarts of milk, the Bowman Dairy company last night said it would also make the reduction effective on pints, a change from 7 to 6 cents. The Bowman company controls nearly one-third of the city's milk and cream sales. The Borden Farm Products company and its subsidiary, Wieland Dairy company, together with the Wanzer dairy, have almost another third of the business.

Spokesmen for the concerns agreeing to the new prices declared that losses would be incurred in the "price war" and predicted readjustments in labor costs would be forthcoming. Cut rate dairies made no announcement of price changes.

Rock Island Mayor Asks 2 Aids to Quit; Defy Him

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Charging that City Attorney Isador Katz and Health Officer Otto Priester are taking an active part in the campaign of George D. McNutt, a rival mayoralty candidate, Acting Mayor Herman P. Brown today demanded their resignation. They have refused, saying only the city council can remove them.

CHICAGO AGAIN GETS ITS COAL AS STRIKE ENDS

Action by Courtney Halts Drivers' Walkout.

Coal trucks were rolling through Chicago streets last night to fill emergency orders and make up the lacks that had been felt since Monday when fuel deliveries were halted by a strike called by the Chicago Coal Teamsters, Chauffeurs, and Helpers' union, designated by State's Attorney Courtney an outlaw organization.

The strike was called off by the management of the union early yesterday. A new union approved by the state's attorney had been organized Tuesday night and had attracted some 300 members of the old one. The resumption of work under the command of the old union officers, it was said, was forced by this decisive action.

Employers Welcome Men Back.

Officials of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association, the employing group against whom the walkout was directed, welcomed their men back to work. They announced they would lend every coöperation to the state's attorney, but were noncommittal as to whether they would deal with the new or the old union. For the present the men are being taken back to their old jobs without that question being raised.

Last night 1,800 members of the old union gathered in Hod Carriers hall, 814 Harrison street, for a meeting presided over by David Reese, president. Reese is under indictment in connection with the alleged Trucking and Transportation exchange [T-N-T] conspiracy and his organization is the last remnant of that once powerful combination.

More than 100 policemen for a time blocked the doors of the meeting hall, but when Attorneys Bernard McDonnell and Joseph Harrington Jr., representing the union, appeared and protested against the action the police ceased their interference.

Protest Courtney Action.

During the meeting there were speeches of protest against the domination of the union by Mr. Courtney. At the end the present officers asked that the members designate them as their chosen representatives in bargaining with th employers. This was done under the provisions of the National Recovery act, the officers said, and they agreed to abide by the decision of the rank and file.

The apparent intention of the old union officers is to throw the whole matter into the lap of the federal government. They asserted that the employers could not, under the act, deal with any other representatives of the union if the decision of the union members was in their favor. Besides Reese the other officers are Milton Booth Jr., vice president; John C. Evans, secretary-treasurer, and Louis Brenner, recording secretary.

Viewed as Courtney Victory.

The resumption of coal deliveries was regarded generally as a triumph for the state's attorney. He was still confident that the Reese-Booth union could be smashed and the men shown that their interests would be better cared for under the new union, which has applied for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Courtney asserted he had sounded the sentiment of the workers in the old union, which has some 7,000 members, and found they were generally in favor of continuing at work and were ready to go under the NRA code for retail coal businesses, which will be put into effect next Monday. He added that the members expressed themselves as anxious to be taken from the domination of leaders like Reese.

Lynch Awaits New Charter.

James Lynch, chosen as secretary-treasurer and business agent of the new union, was awaiting a charter to be issued by President Dan Tobin of the teamsters' brotherhood at Indianapolis. Lynch said that when he received the charter he would start immediate negotiations with the coal merchants for a new contract.

The old scale of pay for coal wagon drivers in Chicago was $7.50 a day, said to be as high as any similar scale in the country; if not higher. Under the NRA code the minimum pay is 75 cents an hour. No difficulty was expected by Lynch in reaching an agreement on the scale of pay.

4 NAVY PLANES DOWN IN FOG; CREWS RESCUED

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Climaxing three grueling days of tactical maneuvers with the United States fleet, four naval seaplanes, manned by eight men, were forced down tonight in a heavy fog by lack of fuel 25 miles off the Oceanside coast. The planes and men were rescued.

Pilots taxied their ships as far as possible toward the shore before sending out wireless calls for help.

Upon receipt of the SOS the entire fleet, en route to Los Angeles harbor after the battle practices, was ordered to steam full speed ahead for the channel. These orders were canceled, however, after wireless reports were received aboard the flagship the aviators were safe.

One plane attached to the U. S. S Tennessee was picked up unharmed by the U. S. S. Texas. The other three ships, one from the U. S. S. California and two from the U. S. S. West Virginia, were picked up by destroyers.

BOY, 7, KILLED BY AUTO.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Ernest Perry, 7, was killed today when he was struck by an automobile while on his way to school.

CWA Investigating Bids on South Park Dirt Contract

An investigation, it was disclosed yesterday, is being made on behalf of the Civil Works administration into a contract obtained by John P. Moriarty, a cousin of State's Attorney Courtney, to furnish 85,000 cubic yards of black dirt to the south park boards. The dirt was used in CWA projects.

Moriarty's low bid on the work was $1.75 a cubic yard. Three other bidders submitted higher quotations. However, the investigation was started when persons, whose names were not made public, charged collusion among the bidders and asserted $1.10 a cubic yard would be a fair price.

Will Report to Ickes.

Federal officials, including those in the district attorney's office, declined to talk about the case other than to indicate no immediate action was contemplated. It was learned, however, that an investigator had left or was soon to leave to take a report on the matter to Administrator Ickes in Washington.

The award of the contract to Moriarty, who is well known as an excavating engineer, was explained last night by George T. Donoghue, superintendent of the south park system.

"There was nothing unsual in the contract," he said. "The fact that Moriarty is a cousin of the state's attorney—I didn't know he was—had nothing to do with it. The parks' engineering staff said the price was reasonable and the engineers for the CWA also approved it.

Calls Bid "Quite Low."

"The material furnished was black virgin soil. Moriarty had to furnish it, dig it out, transport it to the places we wanted it and spread it. In view of the fact that the hauling had to be done in winter his bid was quite low. We have seldom purchased any dirt for less than $1.75 a yard and never in winter. Never in my recollection has a price as low as $1.10 been paid.

"When the investigation was started the board withheld payments due to Moriarty under the contract. Something like 40 per cent of what is due him is still in the board's hands and will not be paid until the government again expresses itself as satisfied."

State's Attorney Courtney commented vigorously on veiled charges made in an evening newspaper to the effect that he and Moriarty are in some way tied up in a business way and that his campaign against racketeering is based on a desire to assist his cousin.

Recalling these charges and in particular the assertion that he sought to assist his cousin in organizing a new association of contractors, he said:

"They talk about an arrangement with Bransfield (John M. Bransfield, wealthy paving contractor) for a settlement. I have no direct or indirect interest in the business of my cousin. It's too bad for the sake of the attacking newspaper that the closest they could come to me was a cousin. I have an aunt in Minneapolis and I wrote to her last night that they can't get me, but to satisfy selfish desires they're trying to get my relatives.

"I was sitting in my private law office about two years ago—I think it was November, 1931. My cousin came in and asked me to represent him as his attorney. He said he had a bank account that was tied up. I asked if any one had sued him. He said no. He's in the excavating business and I found he had signed a note for $21,000 payable to the Engineering Service corporation. I asked him why he had signed. He said: 'When I'm about to do a job in Chicago I can't employ trucks or drivers unless I engage the Engineering Service corporation. It has set a fee of 25 cents a yard.'

Proud of His Defiance.

"I asked him what service they had performed for that fee and he said he didn't know, but that he had to sign or his work would be tied up. If my client owes money I want him to pay, but I want to know what sort of service has been rendered."

Mr. Courtney then related how William Maloney, a business agent for the outlaw Chicago Teamsters' union, approached him for a settlement and how, later, Bransfield visited him. Bransfield was asked, the state's attorney said, why the 25 cent fee had to be paid.

"'You'll have to go to court and you're going to prove why you should get this blood money,' I said," he continued. "As my campaign for state's attorney got under way the suit was dropped. I am proud that I saved my cousin $21,000 in blood money. If every business man had acted as I did the gangsters would not have been intrenched as they were when I took office."

Bransfield, Mr. Courtney declared, kept William (Three Fingered Jack) White, notorious gangster who was recently slain, on his pay roll at $100 a month, supposedly as a truck foreman, although he did no legitimate work.

RECEIVERSHIPS QUIZ TO REOPEN HERE MARCH 19

George F. Cummerow, investigator for the congressional committee on receiverships, announced yesterday that the committee will return to Chicago for a hearing beginning March 19. The hearing is expected to continue for a month.

Mr. Cummerow said the committee would investigate fully the receiverships of all the Insull companies. He announced that several witnesses not called during the Insull town meeting in Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley's court will be heard by the committee. Records of the court hearing also will be scanned.

FIRE DRIVES OUT OCCUPANTS OF 90 APARTMENTS

Fire believed to have been of incendiary origin late last night drove the occupants of ninety apartments in the Sherwin hotel, 1205 Sherwin avenue, to the street. The flames were extinguished after damage estimated at $6,000 had been done.

Firemen searching through the basement, where the fire started, discovered several oil soaked rags. These had been touched off by the arsonist, in the opinion of Chief Timothy Dillon of the 27th battalion, and caused the walls of a storeroom to become ignited. He asked the Rogers Park police to find and arrest a porter who was discharged Tuesday and was said to have made threats against the hotel.

TESTIFIES STRIKE FOLLOWED WHEN HE DEFIED SAPIRO

Laundry Owner on Stand at Racket Trial.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

A laundry owner testified yesterday in the racket conspiracy trial that his failure to sign up under the plan for reorganization of trade practices in his industry drawn up in the summer of 1932 by Attorney Aaron Sapiro was followed within a few days by a strike at his plant.

The witness was Joseph Rizner, owner of the Milwaukee Wet Wash laundry, 4120 Belmont avenue. He was one of forty laundrymen who opposed adoption of the so-called Sapiro plan when it was unfolded at a meeting of the Chicago Laundry Owners' association on July 8, 1932, at the Palmer house.

Tells of Warning.

Attorney Harry Olson, former chief justice of the Municipal court, who represented Rizner and the other objectors at that meeting, also testified yesterday. He told or warning the laundrymen that the Sapiro proposal was illegal and that it laid them open to charges of conspiracy.

The backbone of the Sapiro plan was a revised set of bylaws for the trade association, and a new wage agreement, giving association members preferential treatment with Local 712 of the Laundry and Dyehouse Drivers' union. The bylaws provided for price fixing, and the plan also provided for the payment by members of a dollar a week on each of their trucks to the union, the fund to be used for organizing cut price hand laundry owners.

The allegedly illegal phases of the bylaws and wage contract, with violence resulting from their attempted enforcement, resulted in the present conspiracy indictment naming Sapiro, Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, and union and trade association heads which is on trial before Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan of the Criminal court. Included in the indictment are officials of the cleaning and dyeing and carbonated beverage industries also charged with acts of terrorism and conspiracy.

Strike Is Called.

Rizner, who was questioned by Assistant Prosecutor Thomas G. Bugan, testified that he did not sign the Sapiro agreement at the July 7 meeting, although he was a member of the laundry association. Three days later, George Knott, vice president of the drivers' union, and a defendant, called him and asked to see him. When he replied that he was going to a meeting, Knott replied, he said:

"See me now or you'll see me in the morning."

The next morning, Rizner said, he found a strike in progress at his plant. Besides Knott, Joe Bush Iwaniec, George Bendell, and Mortimer Cook, all officials of the union and defendants [Cook got a severance because of illness], were present, he said. Knott told him that he had left the laundry association and would have to sign an individual contract, providing a higher wage scale than that paid by association members.

Rizner denied he had left the association. When John L. Toomey, secretary of the association, confirmed this over the telephone to Iwaniec, the strike was called off, Rizner said. He denied that he had had any trouble at the time with his men which would have formed the basis for a strike.

In his testimony earlier in the day, Attorney Olson declared that at the meeting on July 8 Attorney Sapiro declared the hand laundrymen would have to be eliminated from the business, and that as a preliminary to this, they should first be organized, as his plan provided.

Calls Contract Unwise.

"I said that I thought the contract not a wise one to sign," Attorney Olson said. "In the first place, there were hints in it of conspiracy in restraint of trade. I said I thought the contract ignored public interest, and read to the audience the conspiracy statute, especially that section concerning conspiracy to do injury to public trade."

Attorney Olson also said he advised the laundry owners that a provision in the wage contract with the labor union granting association members a lower wage scale than nonmembers was illegal. The upshot of the discussion was that he was invited to discuss the contract with Attorney Sapiro and Ald. Nelson, who was attorney for the union.

The next day, Attorney Olson said, he and his son went to a conference in Ald. Nelson's office, at which Sapiro and some officials of the union were present. Nelson, he said, asked him if it was true that he had charged that Al Capone dominated the union.

"I said I never said it," said the witness. "Sapiro called me a liar. I got up to resent it and some one interfered, I think my son. Sapiro said he didn't want anything more to do with me."

Ernest Bartsch, 3630 North St. Louis avenue, a member of the Laundry Drivers' union, next testified to objections which he raised as a member of the union to sections in the same wage contract which Attorney Olson had declared illegal. He was questioned by Assistant Prosecutor William E. Crawford.

On cross-examination Bartsch said that Ald. Nelson was present and spoke to the union members while they discussed the wage agreement, but did not preside at the meeting.

SEIZED IN LOOP

GEORGE (BUGS) MORAN.

George [Bugs] Moran, last of the north side gang leaders, was arrested yesterday by Sergt. Andrew Carroll as he walked at Randolph and Dearborn streets. He was released last night on a $10,000 bond and will be arraigned tomorrow morning in the Felony court on a charge of vagrancy.

Moran protested to Chief of Detectives Schoemaker that he is a reputable business man connected with the cleaning and dyeing business. He told the chief he was on his way to the United States courthouse to pay his income tax when he was arrested.

"I'll get an injunction to keep the police from molesting me," Moran told Chief Schoemaker. "I know a city judge and I'll have him issue the injunction."

"That won't do you any good," the chief told him, "because we can get a new vagrancy warrant for you any time."

"Why do you keep picking on me all the time?" Moran countered. "You know I'm legitimate."

"I guess it's because you look so much like Spike O'Donnell with those spats on," Chief Schoemaker told him.

ILLINOIS HOUSE VOTES TODAY ON BILLS FOR FAIR

Will Convene to Pass Enabling Acts.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Moved to third reading without amendments, the World's Fair enabling acts were placed in a position today to be passed tomorrow. A change of plans, favored by Speaker Roe and most of the members of the house, shifted the hour of roll call from shortly after midnight to 10 a. m. Despite the holiday tomorrow the speaker was confident that the bills will pass.

The votes were pledged last week when THE TRIBUNE polled the membership and 106 representatives said that they would remain tomorrow and pass the bills. Although some believed that the delay might put the bills in danger, the speaker did not share those fears. "I am confident that the members will stay and vote," he said.

Amendment Is Defeated.

Only one amendment was offered today, and it was defeated. Representative John G. Ryan [Dem., Chicago] wanted the bill changed so that concessionaires at the Fair would have to get their help from the state free employment agencies. He presented the amendment, he said, because some employment agencies charged large fees last summer from people for whom they found work at the Fair.

Several members who offered this objection last week said that they were convinced the high fee practice would not be allowed next summer. On motion of Representative Benjamin S. Adamowski [Dem., Chicago], who is handling the legislation, the amendment was tabled.

Had it been adopted the bill would have had to be returned to the senate for conference, a questionable action this week. Only 24 senators were present today and conference would have required 34 votes.

It was in recognition of this necessity of passing the bill this week which led colored members of the house to withhold amendments enforcing equal rights at the Fair for those of their race. Representatives Charles J. Jenkins, Harris B. Gaines, and William J. Warfield, all Republicans, announced, through Jenkins, that while they were not receding from their position that the equal rights provision belonged in the legislation, they would not jeopardize its quick passage today.

Plan Separate Bill.

Instead, the colored men announced, they will prepare a separate bill embodying those principles and introduce it next week. The house aided them today by moving to third reading Jenkins' bill calling for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate "violations" of state and national laws when the Fair reopens. Although it did not mention that the commission would have for its principal duty the investigation of any alleged unfairness to colored people, it was plain that this was Jenkins' intention.

Other members had amendments which they wished to offer. Among those members were Joseph L. Rategan and John O. Pruby, Chicago Democrats, but in the interest of keeping the measures intact and avoiding the necessity of concurrence, they withheld them. Mr. Rategan's amendment would have prohibited washroom fees at the Fair next summer, he was informed, he said, that this practice had already been abolished by the Fair authorities.

FLORIDA SIGNS UP TO ENLARGE EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Florida, through its state chamber of commerce, has signed a contract with A Century of Progress officials for augmented 1934 exhibits at the World's Fair, it was announced yesterday by Earl W. Brown, manager of the state exhibit. The most important change in the state's exhibits will be the construction of a glass covered conservatory in which rare tropic fauna and citrous fruits found within the state will be displayed. Mr. Brown left Chicago for Deland yesterday to direct the work already begun on the new exhibits.

George W. Dixon, chairman of the committee on the Hall of Religion at A Century of Progress, announced last night that the Hall of Religion will not be used for religious exhibits at the 1934 Fair. At a meeting of the committee in Chicago temple yesterday afternoon it was decided that the hall should be used for the purposes of "rest, refreshment, and guidance" this year.

A committee of five was ordered by the general committee to study various possible uses of the building and to make recommendations. Mr. Dixon said a number of religious agencies had applied for custody of the hall for the 1934 Fair. Among these is the International Council of Religious Education. Dr. Hugh S. Magill, executive secretary of the council, was the director of the hall at A Century of Progress.

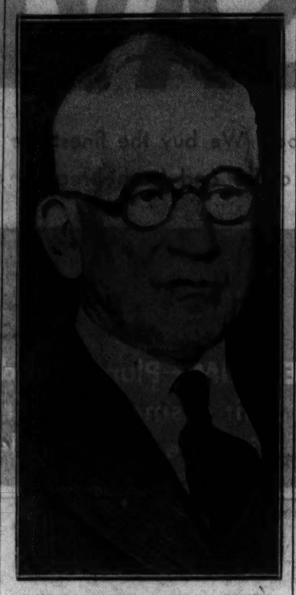
OVERCOME BY GAS



CAPT. MATTHEW ZIMMER.

CAPT. ZIMMER IS LEFT IN SERIOUS CONDITION BY GAS

Auto Fumes Overcome Acting Commissioner.

Matthew Zimmer, 67 years old, commander of the uniformed police force, was in a serious condition yesterday after he had been overcome by carbon monoxide gas in the garage at the rear of his home at 8132 Sangamon street. Physicians pronounced him out of danger so far as the actual poison was concerned but expressed the fear that his heart might have been weakened by the strain to which it was subjected.

Capt. Zimmer was overcome early yesterday when he went to the garage to warm the motor of his automobile preparatory to driving to his office. Found unconscious in the car, he was revived by a fire department inhalator squad which worked over him for more than two hours.

Decides to Use Own Car.

After eating breakfast yesterday Capt. Zimmer told his wife that he was going to ride to the loop in his own car instead of following his usual custom of being driven to his office in a squad car. When John Kelly and George Tucker, police chauffeurs, halted their squad car in front of the home Mrs. Zimmer went to the garage and found her husband.

She summoned the policemen who carried Capt. Zimmer into the house and telephoned the fire department for an inhalator squad. Capt. Zimmer's brother, Michael, warden of the county hospital, was notified by telephone and rushed to the home with Drs. Karl Meyer and Ole Nelson of the county hospital. After he was revived by the inhalator Capt. Zimmer was treated by Dr. Meyer.

Danger from Pneumonia.

"The only danger now," Dr. Meyer said yesterday afternoon, "is from pneumonia or from the heart, which may give way under the terrific strain. Capt. Zimmer is 67 years old and an incident of this kind is extremely dangerous to a man of that age."

Capt. Zimmer has been acting police commissioner in the absence of Commissioner Allman, who is resting in Florida. He joined the police force on May 13, 1892. He was made a captain in 1914 and named chief of the uniformed force on Aug. 1, 1932.

GOVERNOR URGES DEFEAT OF BEER BILL IN SENATE

House O. K. of Sale Over Bars Draws Fire.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Gov. Henry Horner sent a statement to Springfield from Arizona tonight urging defeat in the senate of the Devine bill passed earlier in the day by the house which would legalize the unrestricted sale of beer over bars in Illinois.

As set up in the liquor control bill passed three weeks ago, beer cannot be sold over bars save with food. It is classed with whisky and other strong drink, and Devine felt that "since the federal laws hold beer to be a nonintoxicating beverage, it should be made as easily obtainable as soda water." His bill was passed today by a vote of 114 to 2. The only members against it were Representatives Gus J. Johnson [Rep., Paxton] and John M. Peffers [Rep., Aurora].

Reply Is Prompt.

Word of the passage was speeded to the governor and his reply was prompt.

"Granting permission for the sale of beer over bars," he said, "is contrary to the law as now enacted and is a step which will surely bring back the evils of the old time saloon.

"We labored long to bring about the enactment of a liquor control law, and one of the elements in it most desired by the people of this state is its protection against the return of the evils of the saloon.

"When the law was passed and I approved it, I said that it was not the best law and that it would in time be subject to change and amendment. It is only fair that the present legislation be given a reasonable length of time for a test. However, I did not contemplate any change which would make possible the return of the old saloon and evils which brought prohibition.

Cites Campaign Pledges.

"This is in accordance with President Roosevelt's oft-made declaration and the platforms of both political parties. It is important that we be consistent and not violate our campaign pledges, because we desire to retain the confidence of the people.

"Citizens of Illinois are wholeheartedly opposed to the return of the saloon, and I shall continue to oppose any measure which makes possible the sale of beer over bars for consumption on the premises."

The Devine bill would allow the unrestricted sale of malt beverages if approved by city councils. The sponsor, Representative John P. Devine [Dem., Dixon], former minority leader and veteran member, had no comment tonight when the statement was read to him. He indicated, however, that he might have something to say tomorrow.

President Opens War on High Rum Prices; Orders Inquiry

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt has set out to puncture the soaring prices of legal liquor.

Disturbed because the high cost of legitimate drinks is encouraging the continuation of bootleg booze, the President revealed today that he has ordered his alcohol administrator, Joseph Choate Jr., to inquire into the situation.

Meanwhile, Mr. Choate was making one more effort to bring down prices by lifting the last restrictions against imports of American type whiskies from abroad. American rye and bourbon anywhere in the world may now be imported in any quantity from a pint to a shipload.

President Is Puzzled.

The tiny trickle of imported whisky that has been finding its way into this country despite the high prices and parched throats has been one of the puzzles disturbing the President and Mr. Choate, the President revealed. Restriction after restriction has been lifted without imports reaching the volume Mr. Choate believes they should.

Administrator Choate denies that domestic distillers are conniving with importers to keep out foreign whisky so that domestic prices will stay up. Importers and blenders themselves declare that the government's tariff wall is blocking their imports and that they need government financing, a suggestion which the President indicated today he does not approve.

Imports of whisky must pay a tariff of $5 a gallon plus the internal revenue tax of $2 a gallon. These combined levies, amounting to $1.75 a quart, importers and blenders say, are higher than they can afford to pay out of their own pockets prior to making actual sales here. They are asking that the Reconstruction Finance corporation make them loans to cover taxes and other charges.

Frowns on U. S. Loan.

President Roosevelt today said that he was having Mr. Choate look into the question of liquor tariffs and their effect on imports, but he gave little comfort to the suggestion of government loans. Whisky, the President said, is a highly saleable commodity and banks out to be willing to finance all necessary transactions.

Mr. Choate's order lifting restrictions on imports of American type whiskies stored abroad was an attempt to meet another objection by importers. Previously they were required to bring in fairly large quantities if they wanted to import any at all. This requirement, they complained, prevented them from bringing in a few barrels with which to experiment in making up blended whisky, the chief use for imported rye and bourbon.

President Roosevelt said that he was not considering the previous proposal of the government liquor monopoly in order to bring down prices.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

CALLS OFF AUTO LICENSE DRIVE UNTIL MONDAY

Mayor Acts After 7,000 Are Arrested.

The drive to arrest Chicago motorists who have failed to purchase new state license plates and city stickers was called off by Mayor Kelly late yesterday afternoon. The mayor sent an order to every police station halting the wholesale arrests, but announcing that they would be resumed Monday.

Last evening he said automobile owners should have three more days of grace—today, Friday and Saturday, since there is no provision for state or city license offices remaining open next Sunday—only because the physical facilities for selling the stickers and plates are inadequate to supply the throngs of men and women who sought to obtain them when the drive began Monday morning.

5,000 at License Office.

Throughout yesterday and until late last evening a long line, which at its peak contained nearly 5,000 persons, jammed the sidewalks in front of the 120 South Ashland branch office of the secretary of state. One hundred clerks there issued 10,374 sets of plates during the day and collected $139,570.

At Springfield late in the day, J. J. Nash, chief clerk of the license department under the secretary of state, announced he would keep the Chicago office open 24 hours a day if it became necessary. Nash said he had given orders that the branch office must remain open as long as the line remained at its doors.

He also announced that applications made to his office by mail were being filled within three days after their arrival. He said a large number of applications received prior to Jan. 1 had been allowed to pile up in the office, but he asserted that at present the office is up to date with nearly 50 clerks employed on the license work.

Yesterday 23,248 vehicle stickers were issued by City Clerk Brady and City Collector Kaindl for which motorists paid $270,664, the largest daily total since the license drive began.

Police Arrest 7,000.

By the time the order to cease making arrests was circulated the police had seized more than 7,000 drivers who did not display either license plates or city tags. These motorists will not be called into court until Tuesday, however, being given the same opportunity to obtain licenses that falls to those who escaped arrest.

The police order also directed desk sergeants to release all motorists upon their own recognizance if they are unable to furnish the $10 bond necessary for each offense. This order was sent out after complaints were received that many persons were being held in cells because of their inability to get the cash bail.

Despite the sudden stampede for licenses only a few thousand more than half the total number of automobiles owned in the state had been relicensed for 1934 last evening, according to Secretary of State Hughes. In Chicago 230,000 state licenses have been sold and from the Springfield office 475,000 licenses have been issued. Last year 1,300,000 licenses were issued for passenger automobiles alone.

City Trucks with Old Tags.

Several city trucks, three Lincoln park commissioners' trucks, and a number of private trucks used at the city dump at Wilson avenue and the lake where a large area of "filled" ground is being made, were observed yesterday without 1934 licenses. None of these trucks was halted by policemen at the scene. The work is being done by CCC workers. Police heads, however, said these trucks would be forced to halt work unless they are licensed by Monday.

Nine battered trucks which bore on their sides the insignia of the U. S. mails, but no license plates, were seen yesterday at Lake street and North avenue in Elmhurst. They are trucks used by the Elmhurst CCC workmen, and until last week C. S. Showers, superintendent of the camp, reported, were licensed by the federal department of the interior. An order was received six days ago withdrawing the department's licenses because the trucks are postoffice department equipment temporarily loaned to the CCC. Supt. Showers said he is attempting to get other licenses for the machines.

FURNITURE MEN ASSAIL PROJECT FOR U. S. FACTORY

Charge Russianizing of Industry.

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt's project for a government owned furniture factory at Reedsville, W. Va., is "one of the most serious blows yet struck at the principle of individual initiative in business," officials of the National Retail Furniture association and the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers declared yesterday.

They charged that the plan for construction of the factory with $504,000 of federal funds, which already has been approved by the United States senate, is one of the first "trends toward the Russianizing of American industry."

"The building of such a factory would be one of the most serious blows yet struck at the principle of individual initiative in business," declared Dr. A. P. Haake, an economist who is managing director of the furniture manufacturers' association.

1,000 Plants Already Idle.

"It is certain to contribute to the defeat of the very purpose for which the National Recovery Act was conceived. The furniture industry is considerably overcapacitated with approximately 1,000 units idle because of lack of business. This excess and idle capacity of the industry is more than sufficient to take care of all government business.

Dr. Haake said it is extremely doubtful that the government factory could produce furniture as economically as it could buy furniture from private manufacturers.

Private factories in dealing with the government, Dr. Haake said, are content to make little or no profit, using the business to absorb overhead. In many cases, he said, such federal purchases are used merely to keep factories operating and men employed. If these operations were discontinued, he pointed out, more men would be thrown out of work than would be employed in the government's own factory.

Politics and Business.

Roscoe R. Rau, executive vice president of the National Retail Furniture association, said:

"It is the understanding of the average business man that when a person accepts a political appointment or is elected to high office in government, he must, for ethical if not for legal considerations, relinquish all business connections in private enterprise.

"The question may well be asked whether the wives of those high in government responsibility should not do likewise.

"This is the first step toward government intrusion into the field of private business. Retailers are just as much interested in the trends toward Russianizing of American industry as are manufacturers for the reason that any such radical change will mean a complete realignment of employment which in turn disturbs greatly the purchasing power of consumers."

ENDS LIFE WITH BULLET.

Tony Cassata, 66 years old, 1018 Larrabee street, shot and killed himself yesterday in his home. Police were told that he was despondent over ill health.

CWA WORKERS TO WRECK OLD CITY BUILDINGS

The wrecking of a number of old city buildings by Civil Works administration employés will be started tomorrow, Paul Gerhardt Jr., city architect, was notified yesterday. Among the buildings to be wrecked are the old county jail at Austin and Dearborn streets and the abandoned garbage reduction plant at 39th and Iron streets.

Under authority given to Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt by the city council a contract for the wrecking will be given to the Austin Wrecking company. This company agreed to furnish all necessary tools, supervision of the CWA workers and the job, and pay the city $2,500 for the salvage.

Frank D. Chase, director of the state CWA, and Prof. W. C. Huntington, chairman of its engineering advisory committee, left yesterday afternoon for a meeting of middle west CWA executives in Indianapolis Friday. En route they will visit county administrators in central and eastern Illinois.

Local offices of the CWA were moved yesterday from 10 South La Salle street, the relief commission's headquarters, to 1319 South Michigan avenue. Just before moving, the millionth CWA pay check for Cook county was signed.

ACCUSES ICKES OF POLITICS IN SKOKIE PROJECT

Although an enthusiastic proponent for years of the drainage of the Skokie marsh, County Commissioner William Busse protested yesterday against the taint of politics in the project as it is being carried out with federal easy money.

"Secretary Ickes' home is in Winnetka," he said, "and he and his neighbors will benefit directly from this work. That may account for his giving it first importance. The whole north shore wants the work done, but that is no excuse for Ickes and his lieutenant and fellow Winnetkan, Harold W. Snell, trying to build up a political organization by placing as foremen as many Republican precinct captains as they can get."

It also is charged that Ickes' former law partner, Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the national recovery administration, whose home is in Palos Park, will see himself and his neighbors benefited by improvements on the banks of the nearby drainage canal and the Illinois and Michigan canal with federal funds.

EDITOR BATTLES OFF KIDNAPERS IN LOOP HOTEL

port and telephoned Adler's home. We were told that Adler was in St. Paul, but that he was coming to Chicago. We came up here then and kept watching the trains until we spotted him when he arrived in town Tuesday morning."

The police last night were seeking the south side house where Mayo said Adler was to have been kept. They were also investigating to learn whether Mayo and Wyman had accomplices in the plot, though the captured kidnaper insisted that no one else was involved.

Attacked Outside Hotel Room.

Mr. Adler was attacked as he was leaving his room in the hotel yesterday morning preparatory to going downstairs for breakfast. As he was locking his door he saw two men advancing toward him from a nearby doorway.

One of the men swung a blackjack, but Adler dodged and received only a glancing blow on the head. He caught the arms of the assailant, who was behind him, but was struck another blow on the head, which drew blood.

Mr. Adler shouted for help and ran down a corridor. The men apparently became frightened and ran in opposite directions. The publisher hurried to the main floor, with the blood streaming from his head.

He summoned the house detective, Michael Colligan; the manager, Leonard Hicks, and others and quickly returned to the fifth floor. They entered room No. 538, in which Mr. Adler had seen one of the men lurking a moment before the attack and which adjoins suite No. 539-540 occupied by Mr. Adler.

Find Kidnapers' Paraphernalia.

In the room was found a quantity of paraphernalia that was obviously to have been used to hold a prisoner, including the large trunk.

Four rolls of adhesive tape, four sponges, two home made blackjacks, and a .38 caliber revolver also were found. One of the blackjacks was made of a napkin which had been filled with shot and tied with a string. The other was poorly made of leather.

While Mr. Adler and the hotel men were investigating the contents of the room they heard some one walking in the corridor. They ran out, and a man who had been coming toward the room turned to flee, but the house detective leaped upon him and held him. The man seized was Mayo. Mr. Adler identified the man as one of his assailants.

The police learned that Mayo had registered at the hotel about noon Tuesday, but had previously occupied a room at the Y. M. C. A. hotel at Eighth street and Wabash avenue. An examination of his room there revealed a quantity of correspondence he had received.

Mayo said that Wyman had provided the adhesive tape, blackjacks, and the pistol found in their room, and that he himself bought the sponges several days ago at a 5 and 10 cent store.

Mr. Adler recalled that when he left Davenport last Saturday to go to St. Paul on a business trip, he was informed by a stranger that two men were following him.

A short time after Mr. Adler arrived from St. Paul and registered at the Morrison hotel on Tuesday morning Mayo was seen in the hotel, though he was not then registered there.

An elevator boy, Matthew Kacprzka, 22 years old, 3537 North Hermitage avenue, said that a few minutes after Adler entered his elevator and rode up to the fifth floor, Mayo stepped into the elevator and asked, "Where did the old gentleman get off, at the fifth floor?"

Then Mayo rode back down to the street level and asked where the freight elevator was situated. He told Kacprzka that he had a large sample trunk he wanted taken up to his room and wondered if it would fit in the elevator. After looking at the freight lift for some time he finally told the elevator boy it would do. He then left the hotel.

Shortly before noon he returned and asked the clerk, Richard Kelliher, for a $2.50 room on the fifth floor. Told that the rooms on that floor all cost $4, Mayo said he would take it anyway. He was assigned to room No. 528.

About a half hour later Mayo returned to the room clerk's desk and asked to be moved farther down the hall. He asked if he could have room 538, which was next to Adler's, and being told it was empty he was allowed to move in there. A short time later his large trunk arrived and was taken to that room.

The police communicated with authorities at Davenport and learned that Mayo had formerly lived there only a short distance from Adler's home. He was a shoe salesman in a Davenport store at that time.

Before he left for his home in Davenport last night, Mr. Adler signed a complaint charging Mayo with attempted kidnaping and assault with intent to rob.

Mr. Adler is a widower. He is publisher of the Davenport Times and is president of the Lee syndicate of newspapers. He is also president of the Davenport Bank and Trust company.

JUDGE IN TENNESSEE LABELS CAPITALISTS AS 'KITTY PINCHERS'

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 21.—(AP)—American capitalists today bore a new name—"kitty pinchers."

The cognomen was applied by Circuit Judge A. B. Pittman in an address before a luncheon club here.

"Americans are playing a game of poker," said the judge. "A certain few are the 'kitty pinchers,' who have robbed the laborers and small capitalists of their purchasing power."

Judge Pittman said the "capitalists are keeping the would-be players from the game."

N. U. AND CHICAGO MERGER INQUIRY ASKED BY HOUSE

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The Illinois house today adopted a resolution calling upon Attorney General Kerner to investigate the terms and conditions of the proposed merger of the University of Chicago and Northwestern university. The measure was introduced by Representative Richard J. Lyons [Rep., Mundelein].

The resolution pointed out that the presidents of the two institutions had publicly stated that property now owned would not be removed from the tax rolls but asked the investigation in order to determine whether the interest of the public was legally guarded.

Kerner was requested to furnish the legislature an opinion on the results of his inquiry.

A second resolution, introduced by Lyons, was also adopted by the house. This dealt with the appropriation bill for $365,697 to finance the reopening of the Great Lakes Naval Training station at Waukegan. The resolution requested that the United States senate, which in committee had stricken off the appropriation, and the President be urged to enact such measures as would permit the reopening at an early date.

Each year Turkey and Greece ship us thousands of bales of fine tobaccos—

But why send 4,000 miles for tobacco?

. . . because spicy, aromatic Turkish is the best seasoning there is for a cigarette.

It adds something to flavor and aroma that no other tobacco can give.

Chesterfield uses Turkish tobacco—from Samsoun, Smyrna, Cavalla and Xanthi.

Then it blends and cross-blends them with various kinds of choice home-grown tobaccos in the right balance to give you a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better.

A leaf of Turkish tobacco—smaller than the palm of your hand—800 or more to the pound. There are many thousands of these leaves in each of these bales below, ready for shipment to America.

TAX REVISION BILL SWEEPS HOUSE, 388-7

Yield of 258 Million More a Year Seen.

is to juggle the value of the new 59 cent dollar.

All of the remaining 3 billion dollars are available to meet running expenses of the bureaus and recovery agencies.

At the government's present rate of spending, this 3 billion dollars will last three months or longer. President Roosevelt, however, wants money poured out faster and the rate of federal spending pushed up from a billion to a billion and a half dollars a month.

The increase in the federal tax collections has been due to improved returns from old taxes as well as from new levies. All major types of taxation except the income tax are yielding more funds than a year ago. In addition the government has the new processing and liquor taxes to swell its revenues.

During January total collections from all taxes amounted to 182 million dollars, compared with 87 millions in January of last year. Of this 95 million dollar increase 43 millions was due to the new processing taxes and 21 millions to the new beer and liquor levies.

Total internal revenue since the fiscal year started on July 1 through Jan. 31 amounted to 1 billion 398 million dollars this year, compared with 831 million dollars a year ago, the treasury reported. Liquor and processing taxes account for 30 million dollars of this 567 million dollar increase.

Gold Piles Up Fast.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The influx of gold from abroad slowed down somewhat today, but about $7,000,000 came in on small ships. The assay office reported increased progress in handling the accumulation of gold that has piled up, but appeared to be less than half way through the assaying and weighing of the $250,000,000 of bullion that has arrived since last Thursday on the basis of the federal reserve's daily gold report.

The Reserve bank reported imports of $60,729,600 actually paid for and added to the monetary gold stocks. Of that $54,923,000 had been handled on Tuesday and the remainder up to 3 p. m. today. Of the gold received today $1,660,000, which came in on the Santa Elena, was from the Banco de la Republica of Colombia, consigned to the Federal Reserve bank. It was at once placed under earmark here and consequently did not add to the monetary gold stocks of this country.

Pours In by Millions.

Exclusive of this Colombian gold, the receipts reported today came to $59,069,600, bringing the officially reported imports from Europe in the last six days to $113,024,600. Compared with estimated receipts of about $250,000,0000 in the period, this indicated a "back log" of about $137,000,000 still waiting to be assayed and paid for.

The gold imports reported by the reserve bank as additional for Tuesday included $33,670,200 from England, $10,616,000 from France, $8,291,900 from Holland, and $2,344,000 from Switzerland. Imports paid for today, exclusive of the Colombian gold, were $2,594,800 from England and $551,800 from France.

BLAMES APATHY OF BUSINESS MEN FOR HIGH TAXES

Prof. Merlin H. Hunter of the college of commerce of the University of Illinois, speaking yesterday at a meeting of the American Taxpayers' league in the Stevens hotel, said the only way to reduce taxes is by reducing governmental expenses. The taxpayers' league is a national organization representing various industries and businesses, which is advocating a separation of the tax sources between the state and the federal governments.

Calling attention to the fact that the 285,000 political tax levying and tax spending units in the country are taking between 13 and 14 billions of dollars annually in taxes—which he said is one-fourth of the national social income—he asserted that it is possible to reduce taxes considerably and still retain adequate functions of government.

Prof. Hunter placed the blame for excessive taxation upon the business men. He asserted that if business men paid the same attention to government as they do to business, they would reap the benefits of lower taxes.

The meeting was conducted by J. A. Arnold, Washington, D. C., who is executive secretary of the league. He and several others spoke in favor of a general sales tax as a major source of revenue to aid in the payment of the public debt and for the elimination and reduction of property levies.

62 PER CENT OF 1931 TAX LEVY NOW COLLECTED

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $170,585, making a total of $107,282,149 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28, 1933. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Feb. 21	$ 7,163	$ 24,075
Uncollected	15,192,323	40,607,176
	1930.	1931.
Feb. 21	$ 58,788	$ 80,559
Uncollected	64,456,074	61,947,704

The day's collections of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $1,013.

County Treasurer McDonough announced yesterday that $164,020,107 in 1931 taxes had been collected up to Tuesday night. This represents 62.1 per cent of the total levy of $263,756,604. The collections are made up of real estate taxes, $117,887,141; personal property taxes, $34,267,678, and railroad taxes, $11,865,288.

Collections on 1932 taxes will not be tabulated until the total levy is determined within a few weeks. Of the first instalment of 1931 real estate taxes $68,624,724 has been collected and of the second instalment $49,262,417 has been collected. The delay in the second instalment collections has been blamed by county officials on the litigation before County Judge Jarecki, in which the Chicago Real Estate board is seeking a reduction of 15 per cent on the assessments of the 438,000 homes and small flat buildings in the county.

The board charges that the assessment was fraudulent and discriminatory against owners of small properties. David T. Bjork, building expert for the board of tax appeals, testified yesterday that the square foot base price method used by Assessor J. L. Jacobs in determining valuations is not an equitable system for small buildings.

Boy Scout, Trying Knot Tests, Hangs Himself

Centreville, Md., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—William Wolcott, 13 year old Boy Scout, hanged himself last night with a Boy Scout rope from the rafters in the attic of his home here. His parents told the coroner that, in their opinion, William was experimenting with the noose knot, "just to see how it felt," when his foot slipped.

Inaugural Suit Here

The black velvet suit worn by George Washington at his second inauguration as President of the United States, a medicine chest, and gifts from the king of Prussia are among the personal belongings of Washington which are on exhibition at the Chicago Historical society today. In commemoration of Washington's birthday 203 years ago today a motion picture depicting incidents in his life will be shown at 2 and 4 o'clock in the Historical society's auditorium at the south end of Lincoln park.

Many church and civic organizations throughout the city are observing the birthday of Washington with special parties and programs.

Public buildings which will be closed today include the municipal, state, and federal courts, the city hall, and all Chicago schools. There will be no mail delivery today, according to Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen. Both the city clerk's and county treasurer's offices will remain open for the collection of license fees and taxes. Various business concerns, including banks, will also observe the legal holiday.

MURRAY WASHES HANDS OF DIRECT FEDERAL RELIEF

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Gov. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray washed his hands of direct federal relief today after a telegraphic disagreement with Washington officials.

"This winds up my part of it," Murray said. "I wish they'd taken it long ago."

He ordered dismissal tonight of about 385 county supervisors, clerks, and truckers. CWA workers will assume part of the work and distribute food to needy, Murray said. The remainder of the governor's set-up will be torn down when records are completed.

Murray's administration of relief has been stormy since October, 1932, when he began to handle the funds. Federal aid was withdrawn from Oklahoma last December and since then the governor's applications have been unanswered, he said. His action today came after he had advised Washington he would not deliver 90 carloads of flour unless county workers, who would distribute it, were paid.

LEVI Z. LEITER'S GRANDSON TOWED BRITISH DANCER

Young Earl of Suffolk Announces Troth.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The earl of Suffolk and Berkshire, whose mother, Lady Marguerite Hyde, was Daisy Leiter, daughter of Levi Zeigler Leiter of Chicago, plans to marry Mimi Crawford, known in London as a stage dancer and minor actress. This was announced today. Miss Crawford is a niece of Lord Chalmers, former governor of Ceylon. Her real name is Mimi Forde Pigott. She lives with her mother in Highgate, a suburb of London.

The earl, whose full name is Charles Harry George Howard, will be 28 in March. He has spent very little of his adult life in England.

When 17 years old he sailed around the world in a windjammer. For the last eight years he has run a sheep ranch in Australia. He came home a few months ago and rented the family home, Charlton park, Malmesbury, Wiltshire, from his mother, who has a life interest in it. He is said to be planning to settle down now in England, although he plans to spend some time each year on his Australian property.

Miss Crawford began her stage career in 1909 as a child dancer in "Pinkie and the Fairies." She has sung and played small parts in "Sally," and in the "Midnight Follies." Lady Ashley, whose husband is suing for divorce, naming Douglas Fairbanks Sr., as corespondent, also played in the "Midnight Follies." Miss Crawford has danced in Covent garden before the king and queen. She comes from a theatrical family, her father having been for years the manager of the Alhambra, famous London music hall.

65 Cases of Whisky Burn Mysteriously on Highway

A truck and its cargo of sixty-five cases of whisky was burned late last night in Green Bay road five miles south of Waukegan. Lake county deputy sheriffs sought early today to determine the ownership of the property that was destroyed. The driver disappeared before they arrived after telling a garage man in the vicinity that the flames started when he accidentally tossed a cigaret onto the canvas top of the vehicle.

ENDS LIFE IN PARK.

Steven Angell, 69 years old, 3304 Schubert street, died yesterday in the Lutheran Memorial hospital of a bullet wound in the head. He was found lying unconscious at the base of the World War memorial in Logan Square, a revolver by his side.

THE OLD RELIABLE—THE OLD RELIABLE

THE OLD RELIABLE—THE OLD RELIABLE

Doctors Warn Against Irritating Drugs

Constipation means just one thing—clogged intestines.

One way to start action is by irritating the delicate membranes of the digestive tract with harsh medicine-laxatives (often disguised as candy).

That works for a time. Then the muscles become sluggish—you have to increase the dose. Soon the laxative-constipation habit has you in its grip!

(The Water Way)

Nature's way is far more simple. It is merely to flush out the wastes and poisons—without impairing the intestinal muscles in the least.

That's why more than 50,000 physicians recommend Pluto Water. For Pluto is not a drug or medicine laxative but a saline mineral water. The same amount each time—no need to increase it—always performs, does not gripe, gives positive results in less than one hour—cannot give you the laxative habit!

Pluto Water is gentle—but speedy. That's because the proper dilution—one-fifth glass Pluto in four-fifths glass hot water—promptly opens the pylorus valve... permits the flush to enter the intestines and complete its work without anxious hours of waiting.

Shake off Asthenia!

If you feel achy, listless, only half-alive, that's nature's warning of Asthenia—a condition usually caused by the poisons of constipation. Pluto's famous ten-day treatment ends it promptly—makes you feel like a different person.

CHICAGO SCHOOL BILLS SENT TO THIRD READING

Teachers' Pay and Credit of Board in Balance.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Tribune School Board Reporter.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The seven bills sponsored by the Chicago board of education for the restoration of its credit and payment of back salaries to teachers are hanging in the balance in the Illinois house tonight. All depends on a turnout of 102 members, or the required two-thirds majority to pass the bills as emergency measures.

The bills were all sent to third reading in the house today on the motion of Representative Benjamin S. Adamowski [Dem., Chicago] and encountered no opposition.

According to Ralph Condee, assistant attorney for the school board, who brought the bills to Springfield, a serious situation might develop in the event that the key measure, which embodies Mayor Kelly's plan for selling the 40 million dollar school bond issue to the federal government, is not passed immediately.

Reveals Coming Plea.

Condee revealed that on Saturday proponents of this plan will appear before the education committee of the house of representatives in Washington with a plea that Uncle Sam purchase the bonds in order that Chicago's teachers, seven months in arrears on their salaries, may be paid.

The bill pending in the Illinois house would give the Chicago board authority to pledge school property in the city—unused for educational purposes—to the federal government as additional security on the purchase. Condee said that it would help matters in Washington if the congressmen could be told that Chicago was in a position to obtain funds in this manner.

Six of the seven bills, including the one containing the mayor's plan, were passed in the senate last week, and after their passage by the house will need only the governor's signature to enact them into law.

Advanced to Third Reading.

A seventh bill, which would peg the levy for Chicago's educational fund and stabilize borrowing power, was also advanced to third reading in the house and senate.

"This is a most important measure," asserted Representative Adamowski. "It will give the school board an additional $8,500,000 in revenue and aid in balancing the budget."

Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago], minority floor leader, obtained permission to speak.

"It is the first time that the various interests connected with Chicago's public schools," said Schnackenberg, "have agreed upon a program for tax relief legislation for the school system. I'm in favor of advancing this bill to third reading and passing it tomorrow."

Expect Passage Tuesday.

In the senate the pegged levy bill went to third reading on the motion of Senator Harold G. Ward [Dem., Chicago]. Ward said that it would probably pass the senate Tuesday.

Members of both parties held a conference late in the afternoon in an attempt to agree with representatives of teacher organizations on legislation for Chicago and downstate both. After a length discussion Speaker Arthur Roe [Dem., Vandalia] advised the teachers to map out their program and take it to Gov. Horner. One of the measures proposed was the flotation of a $12,000,000 bond issue to furnish cash for the state common school fund. The state owes the school districts throughout Illinois this amount and Chicago's proportion is $4,000,000.

SCHOOL BOARD RESTORES JOBS OF 7 PRINCIPALS

New Art Supervisor Is Appointed.

The board of education voted yesterday to restore the principalships of seven former school principals who were displaced and given teaching positions under the board's economy program. Each principal is placed in charge of two schools.

The seven appointments, made on the recommendation of Supt. William J. Bogan are:

Marie Bohrer, Bryan and Herzl schools; Mildred Fahy, Schneider and Franklin schools; Claude Williams, Kenwood and Harte schools; Alice C. Stewart, Armour and Everett schools; Joseph C. Thompson, Farren and Parkman schools; Louise F. Blazier, Raymond and Hartigan schools, and Joseph B. Shine, Sawyer Avenue and Hale schools.

Art Director Named.

It is the plan of the school trustees to re-appoint the displaced principals as soon as vacancies occur.

Miss Elizabeth Wells Robertson, a graduate of the University of Chicago and an art teacher for more than twenty years, was appointed supervisor of art in the elementary schools. She will succeed Miss Lucy S. Silke, who retired several weeks ago from school service. The position carries a salary of $4,500 for a ten months' school year.

In the course of the meeting, Supt. Bogan objected to the action of the school trustees in deferring action on several of his recommendations concerning teachers' salary adjustments under the board's economy program. Some of the matters have been pending since last December, he said.

Urges Special Session.

Trustee Mrs. W. S. Hefferan joined in the objection and declared the school trustees should hold a special session to pass on the recommendations. Trustee Ernst Buehler had asked postponement on the recommendations and declared that board members wanted to hear further from Supt. Bogan. It was finally decided that the trustees would confer with Supt. Bogan at the next general committee meeting.

Twenty-three elementary school principals were also transferred to other elementary schools in the effort of the educational department to adjust the system of having one principal in charge of two schools.

SOUTH PARKS BAN BULL FIGHT; GIVE PRAYER PERMIT

The south park commissioners yesterday denied a permit in behalf of the Spanish Village at A Century of Progress to hold a bull fight in Soldier Field during the coming World's Fair. Manuel Arias, an official of the village, explained in a letter to the commissioners that the bull would be a young one and that its horns would be covered. It would be necessary, however, to kill the bull during the fight, he said. The board did grant a permit to the Chicago Business Men's Church league to hold an Easter sunrise prayer service in the stadium.

CANADA SENATE STARTS REDRAFT OF CONSTITUTION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 21.—The Canadian senate today instituted action which is calculated to result in a redraft of the constitution by which the dominion's nine provinces are held together in confederation.

With Arthur Meighen, former prime minister and now government leader in the senate, as chairman, a committee will investigate the series of federal-provincial jurisdictional tangles by which federal authority is prevented from formulating an all-Canada recovery policy.

French Canada will vigorously resist any proposed seizure of provincial rights.

COOK CO. SCHOOL PLIGHT BRINGS SEN. LEWIS HERE

In Chicago for a brief visit, Senator James Hamilton Lewis yesterday said the financial troubles of the suburban schools of Cook county offered a suitable subject for federal financial aid.

"I came here at the urgent plea of teachers in these schools," he said after a conference with County Supt. Otto F. Aken and members of his staff, "and I am told that the physical condition of many of these schools is bad. A large amount of money is needed to restore them, and the county hasn't the funds.

"I agreed that upon my return to Washington I would arrange for a hearing of the county officials before both the Public Works administration and the Civil Works administration in the hope that half of the required money could be obtained from those sources."

Senator Lewis said his visit had no political significance and that he expects to start back to the capital today.

BRITISH RAILWAYS JOIN IN OFFERING NEW AIR SERVICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A new aerial network over Great Britain is foreshadowed in the announcement tonight that four great railroad companies will form a new company to provide air services in the British Isles and elsewhere and to form connecting links with services of Imperial Airways.

The railroads are the London, Midland and Scottish, London and Northeastern, Southern, and Great Western. Together with Imperial Airways, Ltd., they have agreed on a nominal capital of $250,000 for the new company.

The first rail-air service was inaugurated in Great Britain last year by the Great Western when regular daily summer trips were commenced between Cardiff, Teignmouth, and Plymouth. Later additional service was provided between Birmingham, Cardiff, Torquay, and Plymouth.

65 Workers Flee as Oil Burns at Cicero Plant

A tongue of flame which shot out a trapdoor of a pressure boiler in the plant of the Strom Steel Ball company, 1842 South 54th avenue, Cicero, yesterday ignited oil barrels stored nearby. The blaze spread rapidly and forced sixty-five employés, including fifteen women, to flee. The blaze apparently was caused by a sudden increase of pressure in the boiler which caused the door to fly open. Chief George Knoll of the Cicero fire department estimated the damage at $10,000.

RAPS THREAT TO SHUT LIBRARIES IN CITY SCHOOLS

James B. McCahey, president of the school board, assured school officials yesterday that the school board would do everything possible to retain the school libraries in 30 of the city's high schools. The public library board, through Carl D. Roden, librarian, has declared that the libraries will be closed March 1 unless the school board pays the public library approximately $95,000 for salaries paid to the 49 school librarians.

Mr. McCahey criticized the library board for the manner in which the demand for payment was made upon the school board. He pointed out that the library should pay the school board rental for the school rooms instead of charging the schools for the services of the librarians.

"I feel we are doing a service for the library board and they should pay us," he said. "The libraries will continue, however, even if we have to pay their demand. I don't like their method of forcing the collection of the money."

WOMAN KILLED BY FUMES WHILE SHE SITS IN AUTO

Mrs. Victoria Coghlan, widow of Thomas Coghlan, former history professor at Notre Dame university, and daughter of Dr. Frederick Bauer, a Confederate physician who was stationed at Andersonville prison during the civil war, was asphyxiated yesterday in the garage at the rear of her home at 9134 South Hamilton avenue. Mrs. Coghlan was 67 years old. Her body was found by her son, Thomas, seated in the front seat of her small coupe. Although the ignition switch was still on the gasoline tank was dry and the motor stopped.

Neighbors said that Mrs. Coghlan had made a practice of going to the garage daily and running her car for a few minutes to prevent water in the radiator from freezing. Yesterday, they said, she went to the garage at 1 p. m. She was not missed until 5:30, when her son arrived at her home.

U. S. Refuses Injunction Against State Gas Tax

Officials of the Blue Rose Oil company, 5820 Ogden avenue, Cicero, were denied an injunction in federal court yesterday to restrain police and K. L. Ames Jr., director of the Illinois state department of finance, from molesting the employés of the company. Judge Evan A. Evans of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and Judges William H. Holly and John P. Barnes of the District court, sitting en banc, made the decision. Charles D. Duncan, president of the oil company, asked the injunction on the ground that the state gasoline tax law is unconstitutional.

DR. CONANT GIVES HIS FORMULA FOR FUTURE HARVARD

Hopes to Bring Gifted Men to University.

Dr. James Bryant Conant, internationally known chemist and new president of Harvard university, last night compounded his formula of the future Harvard. In terse sentences, delivered with a sharp New England twang, he made his first Chicago declaration of his policies before the Chicago Harvard club in the University club.

President Conant said he contemplated no radical changes from the program of his predecessor, Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell. Nor will he raise the institution's educational standards, he added, because the university has gone far enough in that direction.

Bring Gifted Men to Harvard.

What he hopes to do, he said, is to bring gifted and exceptionally talented young men to Harvard to take full opportunity of its facilities and thus create a medium for dispensing the school's ideals and learning. Also he would stress research for the betterment of men, but at the same time bring the researchers into close contact with undergraduates of Harvard by making them teachers as well as delvers into mysteries.

"The importance of our universities rests upon the fact they are the guardians of spiritual values of art, literature and science won so laboriously through the centuries," said the slim president, whose appearance belies his 40 years. "It is not enough that we have a chicken in every pot and a car in every garage.

Contribution to Civilization.

"It is not enough that we reduce poverty if we leave no permanent contribution to civilization for following centuries. No amount of material success can make up for the failure to do that."

Dr. Conant then said he desired to have gifted men from any social and economic stock up to at least 10 per cent of the student body enter the university and complete training by means of four year fellowships. Through such men, he said, we hope to demonstrate that it is worth while to develop from a purely intellectual standpoint.

"The best idea for education is self-education," he said. "It is not always the most efficient, but there is a great deal one cannot get from books that he can gain in experience with his fellow men. Such associations are profitable.

"More souls are saved around a dinner table than in lecture courses. This is an important aspect of our undergraduate house plan, which we hope in the future to extend to graduate schools so that law, medicine, art and business students may meet and exchange ideas rather than be bound in the confines of specialized education."

Harvard, said President Conant, will celebrate its 300th aniversary in 1936. The founders set a standard, he said, with their expression of its purpose "to advance learning and perpetuate its prosperity."

"It is all too easy to make concessions to the present and jeopardize the future," he concluded. "We should keep our eyes on the future and make our duty today that expressed by the founders 300 years ago."

WOMAN INHERITS A FORTUNE; WANTS HELP WASHING THE DISHES

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Some one to help her with the dishes, a week or so of resting, a short sea voyage. That's what a 50 per cent share of more than one million dollars means to Mrs. Constance May Gavin, wife of a Los Angeles bank teller.

Speaking publicly today for the first time since her attorneys and counsel for the heirs of the late James L. Flood agreed on a tentative settlement of about $1,200,000 of her claim to a daughter's share of the bonanza king's estate, Mrs. Gavin said she had waited so long the money doesn't mean much.

"I guess I've waited for the money too long," she remarked. "O, I might buy a new dress. Servants? Yes, I'd like to have some one to help me—particularly with the dishes! Maybe, though I haven't thought much about it, my husband and I will take a short sea voyage."

Although Mrs. Gavin will emerge financially victorious in the seven year legal battle, one of the provisions of the tentative settlement is that the court records will show she is not Flood's daughter.

Mrs. Gavin's attorneys are to receive 50 per cent of the settlement.

DIVORCE ACTION OF MRS. WILLIAMS AGAIN DELAYED

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The divorce action against the Rev. E. Reginald Williams, rector of the fashionable St. Mark's Episcopal church, today was postponed by Circuit Judge John J. Gregory to April 23.

The clergyman's wealthy wife, Mrs. Dorothy Eckhart Williams, Chicago heiress, was in court with ten witnesses, determined to air her charges that her husband was abusive, that he often was too intoxicated to ascend to the pulpit, and that he threw the bathroom scales at her. Her attorneys protested delay.

The Rev. Mr. Williams said the litigation had been a severe physical strain. He presented a photograph taken several months ago to establish he had lost weight. The court granted his request for more time to take depositions.

MILLION EGGS TO BE GIVEN TO POOR CHILDREN

One million fresh eggs will be distributed to Chicago's needy children during the Easter season by the twenty Kiwanis clubs of the city, it was announced yesterday. The project is to be made possible by contributions and a flower sale, according to W. V. Miller, chairman of the All-Chicago Kiwanis clubs.

"We have discovered that eggs are plentiful and cheap at Easter time," he said. "Because of low prices the farmer is often forced to sell his product below cost. We plan to go into the wholesale market and buy one million eggs. This will aid in removing the surplus from the markets and divert this food product to a very worthy use."

Serving on the Easter committee are Augustus E. Olson, chairman; Joseph H. Robinson, Solomon Westerfield, Henry A. Dormeyer, George W. Fleming, Roy J. Battis, W. V. Miller, and Charles V. Falkenberg.

Held on Charge of Raping and Enslaving Girl of 16

Lawrence Zeller, 25 years old, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Judge Lambert K. Hayes in bonds of $7,500. He is charged with kidnaping a girl 16 years old, raping her and then compelling her to become an inmate of a disorderly house. The plight of the girl was discovered in January, after she escaped from her slavery. She told the police of being kidnaped by Zeller and another man in September and kept a prisoner for several days at 18 West Ohio street.

'NO EVIDENCE,' SAYS FLORIDA GRAND JURY IN DEATH OF NEGRO

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 21.—(AP)—A Hillsborough county grand jury reported today that it had found no evidence of a mob "in the usual sense of the terms" in the slaying of Robert Johnson, Negro, here early on the morning of Jan. 30 as he was being transferred from the city jail to the county jail by T. M. Graves, acting deputy constable.

The grand jury reported it found no evidence to return an indictment, although it condemned a practice of transferring prisoners "at unusual hours of night" and condemned Graves for "the lack of precaution, diligence, and courage, as well as his apparent gross negligence in protecting and defending his custody of the Negro."

"It is the unanimous desire of this body to search for and consider any and all additional evidence which may be brought to light until this illegal and unjustified taking of life if fully brought to light, and responsibility placed upon the guilty parties," the grand jury's report said.

CHICAGO'S DIMINISHING DEBTS.

In the last calendar year the eight major governments of Chicago have reduced their outstanding debts by almost 40 million dollars. The word debt is all inclusive. It takes in funded debt and floating debt. It includes unpaid salaries, unpaid bills, and unpaid judgments, as well as formal evidences of debt like tax anticipation warrants and bonds. At the beginning of 1933 the eight major governments in the county owed $792,400,000; at the end of the year they owed $753,000,000.

The city's debt has been reduced by more than 14 million dollars. The school debt has been reduced by more than 12 million dollars. The sanitary district's debt has been reduced by more than 8 million dollars. The south park debt has been reduced by nearly 6 million dollars, and that of Lincoln park by more than a million and a half.

To any one aware of the tremendous pressure to spend, a pressure so great that the tax appropriating officials of the local government have been unable to resist it for a generation, the achievement of 1933 must seem a remarkable one. It reflects the greatest credit upon the officials concerned. If they did not fry all the fat out of the budgets, they did, at any rate, end the year in a far stronger position than they began it, and that was no inconsiderable achievement. Few municipalities in the United States can match it.

Chicago and Illinois are keeping their expenses in check, and accordingly taxes are on the downgrade. If this policy is adhered to in the state and city the reward will be a substantial one. As taxes go down property values rise. At the same time the inducement to business organizations to move here is increased. People will move to Illinois and Chicago because they know that there they will not suffer from oppressive taxation. Our gain will be at the expense of New York, Detroit and other communities which do not show a comparable regard for the property owner and the taxpayer.

AN EXPERIMENT IN GOVERNMENT ENTERPRISE.

A few facts gleaned from our files regarding government barge line operation on our inland waterways make interesting reading when pieced together. Turning to the issue of July 6, 1918, we find a press notice to the effect that the government would proceed to establish barge service on the lower Mississippi and Warrior rivers "to relieve the railways of much of the heavy movement of bulk commodities that is clogging their wheels and delaying transportation of war materials."

Commencing with two barge loads of grain that moved south from St. Louis on Sept. 28, 1918, a weekly service was inaugurated to New Orleans. A little later we find a statement from the director general of railways that the first five round trips had produced revenues of $48,500 at a cost of $52,000.

The next items of interest consist of a series of controversies involving the disposition of the government barge line after the armistice removed the necessity for lightening the railway burden. From this emerged the suggestion by the director general of railways that a "thoroughgoing experiment should be made with this equipment to prove or disprove economic justification." Finally there appears a statement of Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn that during the year 1924 the Federal Barge line probably will commence operations on the Missouri river and that the corporation is now the greatest common carrier on interior rivers and canals in the world. It is no longer dubbed an experiment.

As a wartime emergency measure this service was a failure. As an experiment it has taught us nothing of any value. We could have surmised that any kind of carrier operating free of overhead and tax obligations would be able to meet its pay roll without the expenditure of twenty-three million dollars to secure this information.

We were willing to concede to the advocates of government operation their emergency service and raised no particular objection to an experiment on a limited scale, although able to see neither the necessity nor the logic, but it is certainly time to call a halt to this assumption of common carrier status. Continuance is not only unfair to competing forms of transport that must meet capital expenditures and taxes but actually is proving a hindrance to the very development it is supposed to foster. Assuming that the restoration of river service will be profitable and desirable, no private group is going to risk capital to compete with a government enterprise sprawled all over the rivers, occupying the most desirable waterfront sites and willing to resort to all the tricks of the trade to attract business and make a favorable showing.

The experiment was to be sold as soon as it had demonstrated its usefulness. Offers for the lower Mississippi service have been declined because the war department has ruled that the properties must be sold en bloc. The highly unprofitable upper Mississippi and Warrior services must go with the lower. To add Missouri river navigation to this condition will have the effect of taking the barge line off the market to all practical purposes.

THE ARMY IN THE AIR.

The government has announced that the air mail schedule will be reduced, for the beginning of the experiment at least. The commercial airways, deprived of the revenue from carrying the mail, will nevertheless continue the other two services, passenger and express. The loss of one of the services, the mails, is a drawback to the development of systems of air transport, and it is not clear what the consequences of government competition and opposition will be.

The possibility that the government, having taken over the air mail, will seek to extend its operations in all the air services cannot be dismissed. To extend would be in keeping with the rule of burocratic programs, which is to expand wherever they begin. The thing may come about either through the weakening of private commercial enterprise or by definite seizure. If so, it will be necessary to contemplate another phase of the matter. The army then will be in complete control of the air. Such a situation, if it developed, could be observed only with certain apprehensions.

Free countries, when they are governed under wise arrangements, promote their national defense, but do not permit an army dominance in domestic affairs. Even if the airplane is not the complete military weapon which its most enthusiastic admirers believe, it is nevertheless an indispensable one, and, in certain conditions at least, a determinating one. If all aviation for utilitarian purposes is in control of the army this weapon will be exclusively in the army hands. There will be few pilots who are not in the army, and although there may be some private planes, the American flyers of experience and skill will be military.

In other words, the protections contained in the constitutional provision guaranteeing the right to bear arms will be modified by the fact that for the most part, if not altogether, aviation has been made a prerogative of government. There will be no civilian reserve of air strength. A virtual government monopoly of the air transportation services will mean a decided increment of governmental internal military power. When governments are masterful such increments must be studied in the light of wide possibilities. At least it can be said that they do not bulwark popular liberties.

Editorial of the Day

SMEAR AMERICA.

[New York Herald Tribune.]

The President's extraordinary language in approving, with conditions, the newspaper code accords, in our judgment, neither with the dignity of his office nor with principles of ordinary fairness. It cannot hurt the press of the country, which has a long and courageous record of public service behind it, lasting far beyond the span of any one man's life, to say nothing of any one administration. If only an attack upon the newspaper industry were involved, it would be fitting to pass by the outburst in silence.

Here is, however, the first time that the President has publicly given support to the "smear America" campaign in which so many of his aids have participated. America has been made familiar with government by edict. Is it now to be subjected to "government by insult"?

The air mail edict is still fresh in mind. The development of aviation was the outstanding recent achievement of American imagination and American courage and American skill in organization. To compare either the intelligence or the ideals of its personnel—whether directing officials or flyers—with the equipment of a very practical politician like Mr. Farley would be to commit a gross insult to the former. Yet this politically minded postmaster general is permitted to accuse this entire industry of "fraud and corruption," to cancel its contracts and to debar its major companies from bidding on government contracts for five years.

The administration, using all the vast power of its official position, sought to "smear" this great industry precisely as other large groups of Americans have been attacked.

The President's fling at the newspapers of America presents an exact parallel.

We hope that Mr. Roosevelt will see fit to apologize to the press of the nation for this gross insult. It makes no great difference to any one that an egregious obstacle to progress like Mr. Ickes takes the rostrum, assumes a holier-than-thou attitude and damns most of America for its benightedness. The millennium is Mr. Ickes' private property, and he is welcome to keep anybody out of it that he likes. But when the President of the United States—the executive head not of any party or section, but of the whole nation—joins in such attacks, the situation is far different. It is so different that the whole problem of the freedom of the press takes on a new and unexpected aspect.

We hope that Mr. Roosevelt will expand and explain his unfortunate and regrettable utterance. He has permitted Mr. Farley with a stroke of the pen to wreck one great industry. The airplane industry has its constitutional rights—whatever they may be worth in a difficult, uphill business struggle. The newspaper industry is in a far better position, thanks to its old establishment and its preferred status under the constitution. But the threat is unmistakable—not so much to the large and strong newspapers as to the small and protesting organs. The question is plainly raised whether under such an administration any code—with its connotation of a compulsory licensing system to which the President makes an unmistakable reference in his citation of the "obligations" of the "nonconsentor" under the National Industrial Recovery act—does not in effect destroy that freedom of speech guaranteed by the bill of rights in the first amendments to the constitution.

When the newspaper code was under consideration by the publishers and the NRA managers many of the former insisted that the draft should say that the newspapers did not waive their rights under the first amendment, which prohibits congress from making any law abridging the freedom of the press. This attitude seems to have annoyed President Roosevelt more than a little. His executive order accompanying the code says, in part:

"The recitation of the freedom of the press clause in the code has no more place here than would the recitation of the whole constitution or of the Ten Commandments. The freedom guaranteed by the constitution is freedom of expression, and that will be scrupulously respected—but it is not freedom to work children, or do business in a firetrap, or violate the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness."

The President's promise that the freedom of the press will be "scrupulously respected" is welcome, even if superfluous. But when Mr. Roosevelt adds that freedom of the press "is not freedom to work children, or do business in a firetrap, or violate the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness," it is natural to wonder what he is aiming at. What states are permitting children to be worked in violation of law? What cities are permitting firetraps to be used? What district attorneys are not enforcing the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness? Certainly the President's language suggests that these offenses exist. No decent newspaper asks any protection under the first amendment except that to which it is clearly entitled: The right to publish what it pleases on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right. The fact that many newspapers have required in the code a simple statement of their refusal to waive constitutional rights is scarcely a good reason why any man, in or out of office, should answer with innuendo.

HALLUCINATIONS.

SOME ONE asks for an article on hallucinations. The word comes from a Latin one, meaning to wander in mind. Stedman's dictionary defines hallucinations: A subjective perception of what does not exist.

In other words, a hallucination is a something that is imagined. As the term is generally used the "imagined" is limited to objects that are supposed to be seen—visual hallucinations; or supposed to be heard—auditory hallucinations. When we say a person has hallucinations we generally mean he thinks he sees animals, insects, or something else that is not where his mind places them.

A good illustration is the snakes that a man is supposed to see when he has delirium tremens. If the man can be convinced that the snakes are not there his mental condition is far less serious than it is if he persists in seeing them, accepts them as real, and cannot be talked out of his belief.

If he is obstinate about his hallucinations we call them delusions. Men with delusional hallucinations are either insane or else they are pretty well on the way there. If the delusional hallucinations are fixed the outlook is even more serious.

An illustration of a fixed delusional hallucination is the man who hears voices where there are none, who believes he hears them, and who cannot be talked out of it, and who will return to the theme whenever he gets a good chance. In every hospital for the insane there are people who say the Lord talks to them every little while and who cannot be argued out of their belief.

By no means all of the hallucinations are the result of the mental state commonly called insanity. Certain drugs are quite likely to cause them. That alcohol has that effect is a matter of common information. It is not so well known that bromides, veronal, and all others of that group of drugs known as barbiturates are very apt to cause hallucinations of sight and hearing. In a sense the ringing in the ears caused by quinine in full doses is a hallucination.

If the mental phenomenon is the result of a drug, such as alcohol, bromide, veronal, or hashish, it will pass away when the system has thrown off all of the drug and the brain cells have recovered from the effects.

Strong emotional reactions sometimes result in hallucinations. That is the explanation of some of the religious experiences that have profoundly influenced society. The persons who had these experiences believed in what they heard and saw. No amount of arguing has served to convince them that what they saw and heard was not real. Their belief was profound and efforts to change them, or what they thought or said, has proved futile. Therefore their hallucinations come under the head of delusions.

Some had the habit of putting themselves into an attitude for receiving a message periodically and of receiving a message whenever they were set to do so. Their delusions were fixed. And yet these messengers have not been regarded as insane. They have seldom been looked on as well poised or designated as men of good judgment and horse sense, but beyond that they have not been distrusted by their associates.

It sums up about this way:

Hallucinations are the result of perverted mental processes. Insane minds and drug soaked minds are prone to indulge in them. But such indulgence is not sufficient to prove insanity.

PROBABLY NOT.

J. V. writes: 1. If a man has inherited syphilis would his wife contract it from him?

2. Would his children have it?

3. Can he infect anybody by kissing? This man has no sores or pain. He is in good health except for his inherited trouble.

1. Probably not.
2. It is possible, but improbable.
3. No.

BUMPS DUE TO COLD.

Miss V. V. writes: I am 15 years old and a high school student. If I am out five or ten minutes in the cold weather I get bumps all over my face. When I go into a warm room again it goes away. Smallpox may be the cause, but I never had it yet. This has been going on since the late fall.

REPLY.

Yours is not smallpox. Did you learn anything about smallpox in the required courses on hygiene in school? You probably have a mild vasomotor disturbance. Cold pulls the trigger. It may be hives due to cold, but that probably would be an overguess.

LOAN ON FURNITURE.

Berrien Springs, Mich., Feb. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Three years ago I secured a loan from a loan company amounting to $250. I paid on this every month with 3½ per cent interest. About a year ago I could not make my payment and the man said the only thing he could see was to get a loan some place else so I could pay up. I went to another finance company and borrowed $200. They paid the first loan company. I borrowed this on my furniture and car. I have paid more in interest than the original loan besides $60 on the principal. I cannot make further payments. Can they come and get the car and furniture or will they have to go to court? W. D.

It is provided by statute that "no such household goods . . . shall be seized or taken out of the possession of the mortgagor before foreclosure, except by a sheriff, and then only after the mortgagee or his agent shall present an affidavit to a judge or any court of record, setting forth that the mortgage is due, or that he is in danger of losing his security, giving the facts upon which he relies, and shall obtain an order from such judge directing such sheriff to seize such household goods, wearing apparel, or mechanic's tools, and hold them subject to the order of the court: provided, that nothing herein shall apply to the sale of furniture by regular dealers on the so-called installment plan."

PROPERTY PURCHASE.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Several years ago A sold a piece of property to B. For some reason B has failed to record the transaction. Now A receives notice that the property is to be sold for delinquent taxes. At the tax collector's office the property is still listed under A's name. If A desires to obtain the property [1] what steps must he take? 2. Is he required to wait and bid it in at the tax sale, or may he redeem it before that time? 3. If A should pay taxes and costs, what would be his status in regard to this property? 4. What steps would B have to take to redeem and how long is he allowed for redemption? 5. If this property is mortgaged what effect does the mortgage have on the tax sale? 6. Would mortgagee be notified of sale? 7. Would it be necessary for him to bid to protect his interest? 8. Would any sale be subject to the mortgage? 9. If mortgage is held by a bank in receivership, what effect would that have on the general situation? F. M.

1. We advise him not to embark on such a course without first employing an attorney.
2. Redemption is applicable only after the tax sale.
3. Merely buying in the property at the tax sale or paying one year's taxes would not give him a clear title.
4. Redemption is the procedure by which the fee owner pays to the tax purchaser the amount that purchaser has paid in. Your letter indicates that you have so little understanding of the nature of the transaction that it would be highly unwise for you to handle it without expert advice.
5. The mortgage would not prevent the tax sale, but the tax sale would in substance be merely a cloud on the title.
6. No.
7. In general, it is to the interest of a mortgage holder to see that the taxes are paid.
8. See preceding answer.
9. This would not alter our answers.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Recruiting for the British army has fallen off to such an extent that 7,000 men are wanted before the end of March and it does not look as though they will be forthcoming.

Pacifist propaganda is partly to blame for the slump, according to Gen. Sir Cecil Romer, adjutant general to the forces. He spoke of anti-war and anti-army propaganda as being inspired by "well meaning but wrong headed people."

There are also other reasons for the failure of British youth to present itself at the recruiting offices. These, Gen. Romer states, are the recent rise in employment, the high standards enforced for entry into the army, and the fact that Britain, like other countries which suffered great losses of man power during the world war, is now entering the "lean years" when the generation born from 1914 to 1918 is coming up. The effect of the "lean years" has been even more disastrous on the larger French conscript army, it is pointed out.

The standards of the British army have gone up in every way, the adjutant general said.

"Many people believe the army is still that of the days of Waterloo or of Rudyard Kipling's 'Soldiers Three.' It is not. Those days have gone. The old beer swilling soldier no longer exists. Three-fourths of the men in the army are teetotalers. The canteen has been turned into a comfortable, well run institute, more like a club than anything else."

The high requirements for recruits, Gen. Romer believes, have undoubtedly been partly responsible for the falling off of enlistments.

"Fifty-two per cent of the men who present themselves do not come up to the physical standards," he said. "This is a fact which must extraordinarily discomfit the citizen who cares for his country. In certain areas—for instance in the big industrial area of the north—the percentage of rejections rises to 68 per cent. It is awful!"

Gen. Romer said, however, that he had no intention of reducing the educational and moral standard or the physical standard for enlistment unless forced to.

"It would be fatal for us to allow a general idea to prevail that we would take into the army any man, whether his character is good or bad," he said. "We must have fairly intelligent men. A stupid man has no place in modern war."

A TAX ON NORTHERNERS.

Riverside, Ill., Feb. 18.—If a law were passed to the effect that every person with money north of the Mason and Dixon line must share it with southerners who are without money I am certain it would be declared unconstitutional; yet the cotton processing tax does that very thing and the northern taxpayer must kick in and like it. Without a doubt 90 per cent of the taxes collected from that source will come from the north, and 90 per cent of it will be paid into the southern states. If this tax is the bribe paid the southerners for their assistance in repealing the 18th amendment the repeal is expensive.

I am connected with a company using cotton cloth in manufacturing. Before the depression we bought a two years' supply. During 1932 and 1933 our sales were but 10 per cent of the 1929 period, the result being we were overloaded with material worth less than half what we paid for it. Under these conditions we have had a difficult time in remaining in business, yet we are assessed several thousand dollars in processing tax and asked for a check immediately, not even given the consideration allowed an income tax payer of paying the assessment in instalments. It certainly was a bright idea to tax a legitimate concern out of business so that the cotton growers can do less work and be better paid for not working. DISGUSTED.

LICENSE NUMBERS.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—An article in Saturday's TRIBUNE stated that all requests for renewal of the 1933 numerals on the 1934 licenses were honored up to Dec. 4, 1933, or at least that is what Mr. Nash says. Well then, why is it that we did not get a renewal of our license as we sent in a check on Dec. 1? We have had our house number "7221" since 1918, so when the secretary of state sent us the license "72021" we immediately sent a request for an explanation. The answer said that our request for a new license had to be received by Nov. 30 to be honored. Also my grandmother, who has had the number 6621 for several years, received the number 66-021.

If any one can offer an explanation of this or show us any reason why we do not deserve our old license we will be glad to abide by their advice. J. E. N.

REPRIMAND FOR ROSIE.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Just a few words to Rosie Quinn Murphy for asking why Rosa Zagnoni Marinoni, that writes in "A Line o' Type or Two," does not change her name.

If only Rosie Murphy Quinn would understand "Wop" she would change from green to many shades over what would be the answer.

But, how absurd! Nobody would waste words of any kind or any language on a person as low and uneducated as Rosie Murphy Quinn. EGIDIA TORNATORE.

TAX HUNGER.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—We are informed that no less a personage than the President of the United States [prior to assuming that high office] took advantage of a perfectly legal and legitimate provision of the income tax law to deduct a certain percentage of his taxable income for depreciation on his farm buildings. At that particular time he apparently saw no harm in taking advantage, just as thousands of other honest American citizens did, of such deduction. But is there any record that he raised his voice in protest against this provision? He does not so state. Did his conscience at that time tell him that he was doing something that was not right in deducting for a "worthless" building? Evidently not. However, as the deductions were evidently made over a period of years, and the barn has now been destroyed by fire, and therefore no further deduction can be made on this particular "worthless" building, the President, it is alleged, is now "insistent that something be done" to correct this so-called loophole in the income tax law. But what about the thousands of honest American citizens who still may have apparently worthless but usable buildings on their farms? Are they to be denied, under presidential pressure, the privilege of deducting a fair amount for depreciation? There are not many property owners who have worthless barns valued at $4,000 by the insurance companies. The insatiable appetite of the New Dealers for more and still more of the taxpayers' money is beyond all understanding.

QUESTION FOR BOOK COLLECTORS.

La Grange, Ill., Feb. 15.—Now that the MacGuffey Readers have again gained attention, perhaps some one can tell me whether one I have in my possession is of any value. It was given to me about 40 years ago by one of the publisher's daughters and is autographed by her in 1889. This is a MacGuffey Second Electic Reader, revised edition, copyright 1879 by Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., Cincinnati and New York.

The autograph bears the name of Emma I. Van Antwerp. One of these Van Antwerp girls was my godmother. I think there were three girls and one boy. Two of these girls are still alive, living in the west. I cannot vouch for the rest. CATHARINE F. PHILLIPS.

THE EXTENT OF THE DEVALUATION.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Mr. Chapin thinks he should have $1.40 of the new money for each dollar due on a gold bond, but he is too modest; for $140 of the debased currency at 59.06 is worth only $82.68 of the old money. It takes $169.32 of the new to equal $100 of the old. To reach the old basis all prices must be advanced 69.32 per cent. E. B.

BIRTHDAY TODAY FOR LINCOLN'S CARRIAGE DRIVER

Now 86, Tells of Service as Boy of 11.

John W. Comstock, who as an 11 year old boy drove the carriage of Abraham Lincoln and was "just the same as in Mr. Lincoln's family," will celebrate his 86th birtday today, Washington's birthday, at 7229 South Michigan avenue, where he lives with his daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Travis.

Mr. Comstock remembers Lincoln as a gentle, patient country lawyer of Springfield who in 1853, having heard of the Comstock boy's skill as a race horse rider, employed him to drive his horses, after assuring his mother that he would be cared for just as if he were one of the Lincoln boys. He remained in Lincoln's employ until the lawyer was nominated for the presidency in 1860.

Recalls Love for Animals.

"After that he hadn't any more use for me, because he had to go around electioneerin', and the trains were faster'n his carriage," Mr. Comstock explained with a chuckle.

The two Lincoln horses were a bay named Daisy and a dark roan called George. Lincoln was attached to them, "but no more than to any dumb critter, for he loved all animals," said Comstock. The roan stepped through the surface of a temporary culvert in a road and broke its leg, Mr. Comstock recalled.

"Mr. Lincoln had a veterinarian come to see the horse, and he told us that nothing could be done to save the animal. Lincoln said: 'Give him a chance.' Then he sat up all night with the horse himself, rubbing liniment on the injured leg every 15 minutes. He said if he could get the horse well, so that it could use its foot, he would never make it do another day's work, but put it out in good pasture land for the rest of its days.

Horse Never Replaced.

"The horse was worse next day, though, and Lincoln saw it could not get well, so the veterinarian coaxed him to let him shoot the horse. Lincoln couldn't do it himself. I've often heard him say that dumb brutes should be cared for better than human beings if anything, because they couldn't understand it when they had to suffer.

"They never got a horse to take its place, using only one horse thereafter with the carriage. The carriage was the style which has the drivers' seat high up in front.

"Often on pretty mornings Lincoln would climb up beside me instead of getting inside the carriage. He said he liked the air better up there. One time his daughter, Julia, who was younger'n I was, came a-trippin' out of the house to get in the carriage, ahead of her father. It was an awful pretty evenin' and I asked her if she wanted to sit up by me. She said, 'You think I'd ride up with you?' I told Lincoln about it later, and he said, 'That shows she's not very smart.' He scolded her about it some, too.

Tells of Fish Spearing.

"Robert, Lincoln's son, was just 2 years older'n I was," Mr. Comstock explained. "We were great friends. Sometimes when the weather was nice Mr. Lincoln would take Robert and me out to the Sangamon river and we'd all go fishin'. Sometimes Julia went along.

"At a certain time of the year the fish get in the shallow waters, and then folks would spear 'em. Lincoln used to stand on a log that jutted out over the river and throw gig spears and we boys would run in and get the gigs, which floated on account of the wooden handles, and the fish. He used to laugh at us and say, 'Don't be skeered, boys. I'm right here. Wade on in.'"

Owen Davis, a lawyer of Orien township, Logan county, who later became Comstock's father-in-law, used to try lawsuits with Lincoln, and often the Comstock boy heard them in friendly arguments over politics.

A Soldier at 14.

"I had come to Illinois from Kentucky with my parents in a covered wagon when I was 9 years old," Comstock said, smoothing his bushy, upstanding, white hair. "My father used to call the northerners 'black abolitionists.' But after the civil war began my parents were both dead. I was 14 years old on Feb. 22, and the following April I enlisted.

"I had to enlist three or four times, as they'd put me out on account of my age. I was with the old 7th Illinois infantry, the first regiment raised in the state. I never saw Lincoln again after his election."

Mr. Comstock had to enlist as a drummer, but later "got a Springfield musket in my hands." Once in Corinth, Miss., during the Corinth siege he thought he was shot, but found that he had left the iron ramrod in his musket when he fired.

JAPAN ATTACKS SOVIET HANDLING OF FISHING RIGHTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 21.—Japan today suddenly shifted from its recent attitude of indifference toward soviet Russia and let loose a bitter verbal barrage in connection with the oft recurring dispute over fishing rights in the north Pacific which again came to a head yesterday.

The charges were given much prominence in all vernacular newspapers today under such headings as "Proclamation to the world discloses soviet breach of faith."

As long as the Russians confined their attacks on Japan to words the Nipponese let the soviets rave, but when Moscow doubled the ruble rate of exchange with the yen and rejected Japanese bids on the Kamchatka fishery grounds based on the old rate, the foreign office abandoned efforts to appease the soviets.

Agreement Broken.

The foreign office issued a statement which, after promising to file a strong protest with Moscow, accuses Russia of flagrantly violating an agreement solemnly pledged by Baron Kijuro Shidehara, former foreign minister, and Alexander Troyanovsky, now Russian ambassador to the United States, in which the ruble was computed at 32½ sen [about 10 cents United States money. The sen is the Japanese cent.]

"Although it was stipulated that this rate could not be altered without mutual consent," the foreign office statement said, "the soviets suddenly notified the fishery representatives, but not the government, that the rate had been doubled.

"Despite repeated requests by the Japanese ambassador to Moscow to see Maxim Litvinov [soviet foreign commissar] or other soviet officials, they professed to have no time and went ahead with the auction over Japan's protests.

Charge Evasion.

"It is extraordinary that the soviets profess to have no time whenever a matter of utmost importance crops up which is likely to be unfavorable for them. This is not in keeping with international diplomacy."

The fisheries dispute harks back to the end of the Russo-Japanese war in 1905, when the Portsmouth treaty gave the Japanese certain rights in Russian waters. An agreement in 1925 reaffirmed these rights. In 1931 a further agreement was reached which fixed the ruble-yen exchange rate and gave the Japanese the right to bid at an annual auction for fishing rights during the next season.

DR. KOO WARNS OF WAR PERIL IN THE ORIENT

Dr. T. Z. Koo, noted Chinese educator, warned of the imminence of war in the orient in an address yesterday before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in the Palmer house.

"With confidence in the efficacy of the league of nations, the world court, and the Kellogg peace pact all but destroyed,' it is clear that no amount of talking will restrain an aggressive nation from its course," said Dr. Koo.

"China has learned a bitter lesson. A nation without sufficient armaments cannot expect to maintain its safety and peace."

$50,000 DAMAGE CAUSED BY SOUTH SIDE HOTEL FIRE

The upper floor of the Reo hotel at 63d street and Stewart avenue, which was built in 1889, was destroyed yesterday afternoon by fire. The blaze, originating in an unoccupied pent house on the roof, spread so rapidly that firemen sounded a 4-11 alarm. Although stubborn under the whip of a northwest wind the flames were subdued after a two hour fight. The damage was estimated at $50,000.

When built the structure housed the old Marlow theater, a stock company playhouse. Early in the present century it was converted into a hotel. All the guests escaped safely to the street.

NEWLY CIVILIZED AFRICA OFFERS U. S. A MARKET

Imports of Dark Continent Increase Yearly.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, Feb. 21.—That the United States, a self-contained, standoffish people where foreign affairs are concerned, should have any export trade at all in this remote, semi-European preserve, is astonishing enough. That it should be able to drive in a commercial wedge which defies all counter-efforts to dislodge is still more surprising.

The fact is incontestable that the United States has an export trade in Africa which is steadily increasing. Each year this intercourse brings more dollars and cents into the pockets of the American manufacturer with headquarters in the middle west.

During the years of depression it is to be noted that American exports held their own in Africa better than in South America or Australia. With the dawn of normal times they doubtless will make further progress.

See Big Profits Ahead.

Observers estimate that American business men should be able to sell 65 million dollars' worth of goods to Africa in 1934. Later the sales should increase to 100 million dollars or more.

Thirty years ago Africa imported little in the way of manufactured goods from anybody. Twenty years ago, before the world war, South Africa and Algeria, at opposite ends of the continent, were the only two markets worth considering in Africa and their power of absorption was very small. It is only since 1919 that the various countries on this continent began importing goods. Their individual needs may seem negligible, but their combined turnover is well worth consideration. At the head of the list, now as formerly, stands the Union of South Africa, followed by Algeria and Tunis, Morocco, Portuguese East Africa, British West Africa, and Southern Rhodesia.

Being new to civilaztion, the above named states produce few or no finished goods of their own. Practically everything has to be imported. Such imports include clothing, building materials, household utensils, machinery, and luxury foodstuffs.

White Population a Factor.

Where the United States is concerned the most vital controlling factor in regard to volume of exports is the size of white population. There are now some 4,000,000 white settlers between Cape Spartel and the Cape of Good Hope. Offhand, a consuming public of 4,000,000 persons would not seem to offer much of a market. But South Africa, with less than half of these 4,000,000 people, imports more automobiles from the United States than does Brazil with 40,000,000.

Of course, native blacks supplement Caucasians by the hundred million and their acquaintance with civilized merchandise is increasing, but so far their main purchases fall within the field of clothing, a line neglected here by American manufacturers. Arabs in the north and Hindus on the east coast take better to automobiles, movies and radios.

Theoretically it would seem as if Afrikanders, white, brown, and black, should satisfy their needs and make their purchases wherever prices were cheapest. As often happens in international trade, however, there are sentimental and nationalistic forces at work which try to obstruct the free play of economic laws. These extraneous forces are exemplified in the present instance by tariff barriers forced on Africa by European overlords.

Only a small percentage of the continent ranks as independent, in absolute control of its own destinies. The rest is controlled in varying degrees of possession by six European powers to wit France, with some 30 per cent; Great Britain, with 29 per cent; Portugal, 12 per cent; Italy, 9 per cent; Belgium, 9 per cent, and Spain, 2 per cent. Furthermore, sentimental ties still bind some territories to Germany and Holland.

No exaggerated conclusions, on the other hand, can be drawn from these colonial facts. Appearances to the contrary, notwithstanding, Africa probably is dominated by economic nationalism less than other continents.

International treaties, the league of nations and other agencies enjoin free trade and the principle of the open door on long stretches of terrain. Thus South Africa, Southwest Africa, and Southern Rhodesia are independent of Great Britain in everything but name. South Africa claims even sovereign status. Morocco is kept outside of the high French tariff walls by the treaty of Algeciras. Tunis, as well as Morocco, is administered under a protective form of government, which presupposes certain degrees of local autonomy.

Kenya colony enjoys still more home rule while Tanganyika falls under the league covenant and Uganda and parts of British West Africa under the Congo basin treaties. Mozambique relaxes certain Portuguese customs regulations out of deference to transit trade.

Many of these dominions, mandates, colonies, and territories probably would be willing, if not anxious, to improve their trade relations with the United States through reciprocal tariff concessions, provided the United States would take the initiative in original proposals.

It is specialties which make up the greater part of American shipments to Africa today. More profitable and more conducive to volume sales would be bulk goods, or "Kaffir truck," as they are called here. Included within the term "Kaffir truck" are cotton piece goods, cheap footwear, cheap hats, blankets, beads, trinkets, bicycles, etc. They are sold chiefly to Kaffirs, or Negroes, or natives, although some go to East Indians, Arabs, and poor whites.

Japan Invades Field.

Great Britain ran up a turnover of $40,000,000 or more in Kaffir truck during the bad year of 1932 in South Africa alone. Japan is now beginning to invade the same field. That it would not be impossible for the United States to follow suit is proved by the curious fact that all cotton piece goods, whatever their origin, are known by the name of "merikani" [i. e., American things] on the Island of Zanzibar, off the east coast. To that island as a distributing center for the mainland audacious Boston clipper ships used to bring cotton goods in the 19th century. For a while, towards 1850-'60, the Yankees enjoyed a profitable monopoly of the trade.

Some forms of textiles, such as denims, suitings, and high grade hosiery are too pretentious for inclusion in the Kaffir truck group. An item in which the United States might easily compete is blankets. Still another, bicycles, could perhaps be worked up into an American preserve if handled rightly. In gramophones, which gradually are being introduced into the native camps, the United States already controls a fair share of the turnover.

Proposal Made to Dismiss 500 Relief Service Workers

Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, said yesterday that he would bring before the commission at its meeting tomorrow a proposal to reduce the unit cost of providing aid to families on the relief rolls in Cook county by means of rigid administrative economies.

This reduction will be accomplished in two ways, he said, if his plan is approved by the commission. First, five hundred professional social workers and clerks in the unemployment relief service will be dismissed. Second, the commission's policy of 50 families per case worker will be amended to include all administrative officials in the count of workers. At present only social workers and clerks in the stations are counted in the apportionment of fifty cases per worker. This change would further decrease the staff of social workers and clerks.

At the meeting tomorrow, Mr. Dunham said, commission members will begin studying disclosures made by THE TRIBUNE that the unit cost of administering relief has risen sharply in the last 15 months.

91.7 Per Cent Increase in Year.

During the year ending last Oct. 31, it was shown, the unit cost in social workers' salaries alone for providing relief increased 91.7 per cent, while the number of families actually receiving relief decreased 13.5 per cent. During January of this year another large increase in unit cost was disclosed. The cost per family in social workers' salaries increased 31.7 per cent while the number of families on the rolls decreased 29 per cent.

Yesterday a further study of the unit cost in individual relief stations disclosed that the unit cost in social workers' salaries to provide relief to each family in the South Shore district, 8610 Commercial avenue, was $5.48 for the month of September, 1933. General district expenses per family amounted to 43 cents in September, making the total unit cost $5.91.

The South Shore district doled out $42,888 in direct relief in September to 1,645 families, an average of $25.76 per family. According to these figures, 23 cents of every relief dollar spent in the district in September went for salaries and expenses, and 77 cents for direct relief. Previously the commission had estimated that administrative costs were only 10 per cent.

Last October the unit cost of providing relief to the 1,661 families on the rolls of the South Shore station in social workers' salaries was $4.78, compared with $1.42 for October, 1932, an increase of 236 per cent. The condition in this station was not remedied until Dec. 15 when the station was closed.

Lower at Other Stations.

In two other relief stations on the south side, the Bridgeport district at 2901 South Michigan and the Roseland district, 50 East 109th street, the unit cost increase in the same period was lower. Last October the unit cost in the Bridgeport district was $3.13, an increase of 115 per cent over October, 1932, which was $1.45.

Last October the unit cost in the Roseland district was $4.18, an increase of 190 per cent over the unit cost in October, 1932, which was $1.44. During this period the social workers' salaries increased 8.9 per cent in the Bridgeport district while the number of relief cases decreased 49.5 per cent. In the Roseland district salaries increased 43.6 per cent while the relief cases decreased 50 per cent and in the South Shore district salaries increased 32.6 per cent while relief cases decreased 80 per cent.

The variation in the unit cost increases of the three stations between October, 1932, and October, 1933, is 121 per cent, which indicates a lack of administrative control over the individual stations, according to relief officials.

CAPTAIN REPORTS SHIP STRIKING OCEAN SERPENT

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—All those persons who have been wondering what has happened to the beautiful sea serpent at Loch Ness, Scotland, may turn their eyes to the Gulf of Mexico. The serpent's there, according to Capt. L. Baker of the Clyde-Mellory freighter, Pecos, reaching this port today, described the ocean beastie. According to his report, the serpent established contact with the bow of the freighter last Thursday night at about 10 p. m., in latitude 27.06 north, longitude 89.15 west.

"The third officer reported that we had struck some wreckage, and that it was still hanging across the ship's stem. I investigated, and his report appeared to be correct, so I slowed the ship to see if it would drop off and then had the engines set astern to keep it from fouling the propeller.

"When the ship lost headway, we saw that instead of wreckage it was some sea animal, and we had apparently struck it amidships and it had bent around the stem and stayed there. From what we could see, the thing appeared to be thirty or forty feet long, and the part that showed out of water was five or six feet broad and dark, being a grayish brown spotted color.

COLGATE TESTS SHOW LIGHT BEDTIME SNACK IS AN AID TO SLEEP

South Hadley, Mass., Feb. 21.—(AP)—If you are like eight healthy young collegians at Colgate university, the best way to get a superior night's sleep is to eat a light snack just before going to bed.

The eight, all young men, demonstrated this 100 per cent in the psychological laboratory, and kept it up for five months running. The results and reasons were announced here today by Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the laboratory, at a meeting of faculty and students of Mt. Holyoke college.

6 YOUTHS HELD TO GRAND JURY IN 30 ROBBERIES

Six members of an alleged gang of brutal young desperadoes, accused of holding up more than thirty hospitals and hotels on Chicago's north side before their capture a week ago, were held to the grand jury on charges of robbery yesterday by Municipal Judge Frank M. Padden. He set their bonds at a total of $525,000.

The six are Martin Maniscalo, 18 years old; Jack Ball, 21 years old; Michael Quarrato, 20 years old; John Formalia, 24 years old; Thomas Shannon, 19 years old, and Andrew Tennerralo, 23 years old. Witnesses said that in most of the robberies the young gunmen slugged their victims.

Four alleged "stoplight" robbers were held to the grand jury in bonds totaling $195,000. These defendants were Carmen Triori, 17 years old; Henry Ball, 18 years old; Carmen Raymond, 19 years old, and Pasquale Laphen, 19 years old.

THOUSANDS DIG; EAST RECOVERS AFTER BLIZZARD

Sun Brighter; Supplies Moving Faster.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—With bright sunshine and rising temperatures aiding in the task, New York City and a large section of the eastern states went to work in earnest today digging out from under the heavy snow blanket brought by the blizzard that hit the region Monday night and paralyzed transportation and business.

In New York and throughout the affected territory, however, transport facilities still were far from normal, despite two days of labor. Many outlying snowbound communities reported food supplies running low, with highways and important sections of railroad lines still buried in frozen snow drifts.

With 50,000 men plying shovels and plows against the ice coated drifts, the city itself was the first to recover from the storm. Transportation, communications, and food deliveries were making a fast return to normalcy tonight. Schools which were closed yesterday when teachers and pupils found it impossible to get to classes were reopened, with regular attendance, and commuters again were able to come to work, as railroads resumed normal schedules in most cases. Those killed by the storm in the east reached a total of 32.

Horses were in great demand in all south shore communities. A horse sled was used, for the first time in many years, to take a maternity case to the South Side hospital at Bay Shore. A man seized with appendicitis was brought to the hospital in a similar conveyance.

JAPAN AND BRITAIN REACH DEADLOCK IN FAIR TRADE PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Negotiations between representatives of the cotton trade at Lancashire and Japan to try to end cutthroat competition are not going too well.

At the first meeting, held a week ago, it was discovered that while the Japanese will make an agreement for division of markets in the British empire, where the British might be able to exclude them altogether, they insisted on unrestricted competition in the rest of the world.

The British refused to accept this and the meeting adjourned until today to give Mr. Okada, chief Japanese delegate, an opportunity to communicate with Japan. Today the Japanese insisted on their original position. The conference was adjourned for another week.

Brakeman Rescues Youth from Death in Freight Car

A brakeman who peered in an open trap door of a freight car on an Illinois Central train bound for Chicago last evening saved the life of a youthful wayfarer who was stealing a ride inside. The youth was overcome by carbon monoxide fumes generated by a coke burner which was placed in the car to keep its cargo of bananas from freezing. The train was stopped at Harvey and the youth, who identified himself as James Kettles, 21 years old, of Dalton, Ga., was revived by a Harvey pulmotor squad. He said he had boarded the train at Kankakee.

Sports Lovers Fear Thaw Will Mar Holiday

Warm Weather Menace to Toboggan Slides.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE dozens of winter sports devotees who planned to celebrate Washington's birthday by having a glorious day of skating, skiing, tobogganing or bobsledding watched the rising thermometer yesterday with dismay, for they feared that the snow, even in the country, would be gone by this morning.

This has been a bad winter for those hardy souls who enjoy winter sports, for when there has been ice and snow it has been so cold that it wasn't comfortable to be outdoors for any length of time even when bundled up in warm and smart sports togs.

Consequently the toboggan slides and ponds at the various country clubs have been in disuse most of the time. Out at the Indian Hill club in Winnetka where fashionable residents of that north shore village indulge in the sports that make cheeks rosy and eyes bright and toes and fingers cold, the slide has been in use only about eight or nine days so far this season. The ice on the pond has been fairly good, however, so there has been skating almost every day. The club is having a dinner dance on Saturday of this week, the first party since the Christmas holidays which were packed full of festivities at this club.

The Exmoor and Glenview clubs have fared the same with their toboggans and ponds, and those members of these north shore clubs who feel that the winter isn't complete without more winter sports than they've had so far are hoping that we'll have a good old fashioned spell of winter weather before long with plenty of snow and ice.

Seek Winter Sports at Wayne Today.

A group of young people who live in the city are driving out to Wayne early this morning to enjoy whatever they can find to do in the way of cold weather sports. They hope to discover a farmer near the Dunham Woods Hunt club who will rent them a sleigh and team, but we feel certain they won't be successful in this, having tried ourselves ever since Sunday to discover a farmer in the Fox river valley who would help us to have a sleigh ride, and not finding one who would let his horses venture out on roads covered with so little snow. Skijoring undoubtedly will be the sport the group will enjoy and, after all, that's just about as much fun as anything. Some of those who will be in this party are Miss Caroline McNair and Glendon Gerlach, Miss Marianne Stevenson and her fiancé, Paul Magnuson Jr., Miss Caryl Bloomingston and Philip B. Hosmer Jr., Miss Barbara Eldridge and William B. Goltra, and Hoyt Thompson.

About twenty friends of the Farwell Winstons have been invited to have luncheon today with that attractive couple at their home in Lake Forest and, if the weather is propitious, the party will move on to the Winter club in the afternoon for skating. Otherwise bridge tables will be set up in the huge and comfortable living room and the guests will enjoy the afternoon in front of the fire.

A number of Winnetkans got tired

Front Views and Profiles
By June Provines

OUR weekly taxi driver story concerns the driver who had adorned the front of his cab with "Keep Smiling" and "Why Worry" signs.

Collector—Author—Town Talk.

An artificial red rose adorned a third sign, which said, surprisingly enough, "Merry Christmas." We commented on the gayety of his cab adornments and he beamed.

"I just had a drunk in here," he said. "He looked at that 'Merry Christmas' sign and said he had no idea it was Christmas and he must be drunker than he thought."

* *

AFTER volunteering this little joke the driver pointed out a decoration that had eluded our observation. A great pearl attached to a metal loop dangled from the meter.

"My girl's earring," he explained.

Curious as to whether it was sentiment or merely a collector's instinct that was responsible for all this, we asked how come.

"O, when I was a kid I was the kind that had a lot of buttons and pins stuck in my cap," he said as if that explained everything.

ENGLISH Novelist Phyllis Bentley, who lectured in town yesterday, met leading Chicago writers at a luncheon party at the Blackstone. Margaret Ayer Barnes, who is about to start off on a lecture tour to points east, was there. And Dorothy Aldis, whose new book of children's verse, "Hop, Skip, and Jump," will be off the press Saturday; Vincent Starrett and Marion Strobel Mitchell, who is writing a third—or is it a fourth—novel; and Marcella Hahner, whose name is inseparably linked with books and authors, and a half a dozen others. Miss Bentley is young and slim and pleasantly shy, wears eyeglasses, and is a little reminiscent of the school teacher with the spectacles in "Autumn Crocus." At luncheon yesterday she was busy making a list of books by American authors she had not read, and the Chicago authors were making suggestions—not their own books either, we add hastily. Robert Nathan's "One More Spring" was one of the books suggested, also William Faulkner's books, which she had not read.

THE Gossip Shop. A meeting of some interest this week was that between Bruce Lockhart, author, diplomat, and lecturer, and Samuel N. Harper. The last time they met was in Russia seventeen years ago, at the time Kerensky was in power. Massine, of the Monte Carlo ballet, hopes to produce an American ballet before the company leaves America. The music is written and Massine has completed the choreography, but as yet no satisfactory backdrop has been found. Massine wants an American scene of the "naive period" and thinks maybe it might show railroad tracks. A friend is taking him to see a collection of Currier and Ives prints to see if that type of art approximates his idea. . . . The Paul Moyers are in New York. . . . Peggy Hambleton, back from a visit with Margalo Gilmore in New York, tells about the Billy Rose, impresario of the night club they visited one night, who, when a troupe of girlies came out to sing and dance, kept saying earnestly: "Just listen to that diction. Isn't it marvelous?" . . . Augustus Peabody has attended every performance of the Russian ballet in Chicago.

Good Morning!

Miss Constance Bennett, thoroughly enjoying herself in a dual rôle that suits both her personality and ability excellently, is letting Mr. Franchot Tone learn about women from her over on the United Artists' screen.

"Moulin Rouge" hasn't anything new to offer in the way of plo You observed the same general situation in "The Guardsman." And, since Bert Lytell appeared in "Brothers," dual rôles have been perpetual and popular screen fodder. All of which does not prevent the piece from being genuinely entertaining. It is an elaborately staged production and the inconsequential story material, with its meringue of comedy, is handled with light, sure touch.

There are several musical numbers featuring Miss Bennett. She proves, as have Claudette Colbert, Myrna Loy, Carole Lombard, and other cinema sirens, that, if the movies ever DO fold up, she's all set to slip right into an entertainer's job. She sings easily, in a quiet, throaty voice that's pleasantly soothing—and she's learned a lot about pantomime since she married the marquis.

Her first appearance is in a dark wig. Becoming? So so. She's the wife of a playwright (Tone), and, O, how she does want the leading rôle in a forthcoming musical comedy written by her husband! Once Helen had been half of a sister act—and she's never stopped yearning for the footlights. But her husband, who wants her to be just the little woman at home, says No—emphatically NO. Even after the producer, a friend of the pair, has waxed enthusiastic over her ability. . . .

Great excitement! The Parisian favorite, Raquel, finally signs for the lead . . . !

She keeps her own counsel. BUT . . .!

Far be it from me to reveal what plottings between Mrs. Hall and the gay Parisian [?] bring forth. . . .

The light plot unreels smoothly, inciting considerable mirth in the observer.

Franchot Tone is the last word in what he ought to be as the author husband, who is outwitted—sometimes to her consternation—by his masquerading spouse. He has a grand sense of comedy and a quietly infectious way of getting his scenes over.

Tullio Carminati is delightful as the producer. He is so facile, so responsive to the demands of a situation! Too, he can sing and play. While, as for making love—la, la! Supporting players are skilful.

Audiences are enjoying "Moulin Rouge"—as, indeed, they should.

Film Girls Not Equals of Stage Sisters—White

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The film girls of Hollywood can't measure up to the stage girls of New York, and the man who tossed this explosive pronouncement is George White, creator of stage "Scandals" on Broadway and screen "Scandals" here.

"The girls here are as pretty," White says, "I grant you that. But they are not prettier. The Hollywood girls don't dress as well. They aren't as poised. They aren't as smart. They don't have that air. Of course, there's an explanation for it. The girls in Hollywood who work in pictures don't come in contact with the public that sees 'em. The only people they see and go around with are the muggs around the movie studios.

"On the stage the beautiful girls in the shows meet all kinds of people—rich people, cultivated people, muggs, smart people, outstanding people in different lines. They get around. The girls in motion pictures, who, I am granting, are as beautiful to begin with, don't have these advantages. They don't get around. If they did get around there are not the same kinds of people for them to brush up against out here."

White says: "Girl for girl, the New York girl has it on the Hollywood queen. In fact, I won't specify merely the New York girl. I will say, girl for girl, the stage girl has it on the motion picture girl.

"Why, the night of the Screen Actors' guild banquet I wanted to take a beautiful girl from my picture—a Hollywood girl—to the banquet with me, but I knew she wouldn't look right in that company. What did I do? I took two of the girls I had brought from New York with me, Eunice Coleman and Peggy Moseley, and they made an effect. What happened to one of the girls from my show out here, meaning Marcelle Edwards? She got nowhere. She went to New York and Tommy Manville met her and she married a millionaire. Can the beautiful girls in Hollywood do that? You know they can't. The class isn't there."

Four girls whom White brought here from Broadway he is taking east with him to start rehearsals for the new stage "Scandals" in a couple of weeks. He also will take six Hollywood beauties east with him and use the sextet for six living examples of what a beauty entrepreneur can do to add that New York "class" which gives even a beauty that touch of something extra.

The six are: Edna Mae Jones of Los Angeles; Ramonda Shirley, born in Chicago, educated in San Francisco; Alice Janss of Kansas City, blondes; Martha Merrill, New York; Lucille Walker, Carter de Haven's niece, and Maxine Nash of Pasadena, brunettes.

White is hurrying east to sit in at the first showing of his first film, the Fox studio "Scandals," at R. K. O. Music hall, New York, the first week in March. He also says: "I am not through with motion pictures. This one has turned out better than I expected and I am going to make more. In fact, arrangements are partly carried out to produce them right in New York. I have a deal with Gregory Ratoff. He will appear in a dramatic story I expect to film in a New York studio shortly."

Ballet Troupe Dances On to New Sensation

"Le Presages" Ultimate in Art, Says Critic.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Up to last night I had supposed that "The Three Cornered Hat," presented by the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe at the Auditorium Tuesday night was the ultimate in ballet as far as this generation might venture to hope. I was wrong. Last night the organization put on "Le Presages" [Destiny] to the music of Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, and at its end I staggered out, not quite sane in either judgment or emotion.

Even now there is some reason to doubt why either Tschaikowsky's music or the none too important legend going with the music should have made such an impression. But it did. Apparently only one thing is certain, and that is that Leonide Massine in his choice of this symphony and in his choreography thereof was not far from becoming a genius.

He would seem to have been thoroughly fond of music, as much as I am for an example, plus the ability to translate its phrases into action. From a technical standpoint he is one of the few who have ever realized that a continuously repeated musical phrase should have a continuous repetition in action. Consequently the first movement, with the girls in purple and the boys in green to represent the first theme and the girl in gray for the second, was as direct a translation of the music as was ever seen.

But more than that, he began to pile up emotion. There was the second or slow movement, wherein Irina Baronova and David Lichine presented an adagio dance that set standards for all adagio dances; the third, or waltz, with Tatiana Riabouchinska as the spirit of frivolity; the fourth, where strife conquers the temptations of evil, which had the most stirring emotional impulse of all.

This was ballet in all maturity, ballet that takes no odds and demands no apology from any other art he world has ever devised. Only those who were there will know the effect that it made. Unfortunately it will not be repeated unless the company comes back to Chicago.

Two performances will be given today. This afternoon's program will contain "Les Sylphides," the new "School of Ballet," and "Le Beau Danube." Tonight there will be "Petrouchka." "The Three Cornered Hat," and "Prince Igor." These, with extreme regret, will conclude the engagement.

Alexander Sebald, who has been on the invalid list for some time, is now recovered, and as a sign thereof, he appeared with his own string quartet at Kimball hall last night. Quartets by Beethoven and Schubert took the second and third places in the program, but the first was something less familiar. It was the quartet for piano and strings in C minor by Franz Philipp, and here there was the assistance of an uncommonly able and talented pianist, Elizabeth Moritz. It was one of the best performances of the season.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

We found an oil the other day that we consider a jewel among the oils that inevitably make their way in one form or another to the dressing table of the beauty seeking woman.

This oil, with a delicate rose scent and pinkish in color, is truly versatile, we'd say. You can use a tiny, tiny bit of it in lieu of brilliantine if your hair needs gloss; you can use it when you give yourself an oil treatment before a shampoo and when you want to give yourself the luxurious, restful treat of a hand or foot massage, out comes your little bottle of oil again.

Best of all, to our way of thinking, you can use it as a body oil, one of the things that we, as a dry skinned gal, always try to ferret out for the benefit of sisters who suffer as we do.

As a body oil it can be used before or after bathing; we would prefer it after the bath, applied very, very sparingly to the dried body and rubbed in well. If its use it sparing—and you DON'T have to slather it on to get the full benefit—it will leave no stickiness to give a messy feeling or soil the clothing. If you want to make doubly sure of eliminating any possibility of the stickiness rub the oil in well, wait a minute and then use a bath towel. There won't be a trace.

The oil is not expensive, as such highly refined cosmetic oils go, and we're so sold on its effectiveness that we can't caution you too strongly to use a very little at a time. It seeps in so thoroughly that you can even use it on your hands during the day if you give yourself a few minutes for the operation from start to finish.

Wear Colored Dresses with Winter Coats

BY RHEA SEEGER.

A nice midwinter indoor recreation for shoppers who have tired of every dud they have hanging in their wardrobes, is this new stunt of combining colors.

For instance, a high colored dress with your now dated fur trimmed or fur coat . . . lots of exciting combines are possible . . . but one of the newest is the daring one of chalky dull white under a dark coat. This combination will please from the first glance . . . you can shop for stunning new white woolens, and have some clever dressmaker fashion you a fascinating new white wool almost while you wait. Worn under sleek, slim, black coats frosted with luxurious collars of silver fox they are eye-filling indeed!

If you are one of the lucky gals with a mink coat hanging around your shoulders, these white wools are just what you need . . . somehow the white becomes a creamy, flattering ivory contrasted against the spicy brown of the mink . . . this new white dress arrangement seems to have a magic influence, for, no matter what color the coat, the dress seems to be shaded with the same tone.

Other winning combines are very light powder blue wool worn with deep brown or black, a scarlet to be worn under a bottle green coat, or the acid green color of chartreuse worn with deep amber biege or a darker tree green.

Slate gray slides charmingly under brown, and does grand things for deep blue and black coats . . . a pale coral shrieks for the contrast of oxford gray and can go places with brown in a most effective manner.

The thing to do is to drag out all your colored frocks, and remate them to the winter coat and any coat ensembles you already have . . . you'll be suprised at the thrilling results!

Queen Mary Visits Industries' Fair, Buys Underwear for King

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Royal publicity agents visited the British Industries' fair today. Queen Mary made a lengthy tour of the textile section, followed later by the duke of York.

And were intimate secrets revealed by the royal purchases!

First, the queen bought a nice warm set of undies for the king—complete with vest and long pants—made of pure South African wool.

The next intimate secret was let out by the duke of York, who, when being shown a suit of gayly striped pajamas, declared:

"Men never buy this sort of thing for themselves. I don't. Wives buy them for their husbands. I think bright fashions in men's pajamas are designed to catch the eyes of the wives."

Harvard Professors Hear Goldwyn Predict the End of Film Cycles

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Samuel Goldwyn told a group of Harvard university professors today that within two years 50 per cent of the type of pictures "produced today will not be made."

"As soon as companies realize that the film industry is not like the automobile industry there will be better pictures," he said. "The public rapidly is becoming fed up with a succession of films each a carbon copy of the other."

The famous producer, once a Boston clerk, returned to Cambridge today as the guest at a luncheon given by Prof. Georges Doriot at the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Ushers in N. Y. Film Theaters Threaten to Strike for NRA Union

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—A strike of 20,000 ushers, doormen, ticket takers and janitors in theaters in this city will be called Monday night unless motion picture theater owners comply with the NRA section dealing with collective bargaining, Charles C. Levey, secretary and treasurer of the Theater and Amusement Employés union, said today.

He made the threat in a telegram to Senator Robert F. Wagner, head of the National Labor board in Washington, asserting that the local labor board had given the union "the run around," and that theater owners had disregarded the board's recommendations that workers said to have been the objects of discrimination because of union activities be reinstated in their jobs.

Society Goes to Three Teas in Single Day

Society folk, young and old, found cheer yesterday afternoon in a cup of Russian tea or an "old-fashioned" at three tea and cocktail parties.

Dozens of Helen Szukalska's friends and admirers crowded the Breckenridge galleries between 4 and 6 to drink a cup of Russian tea, rum flavored, to her success as an artist. Lining the gallery walls were several of the finest examples of her work, an exhibition that is to continue several weeks.

Miss Marouchka Anisfeld and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey were presiding at the tea table. And among those exchanging enthusiastic comments on the exhibit were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Noyes and their daughter and son-in-law, the George Senseneys: Conductor Bojanowski, Mrs. Graham Aldis, Mrs. Clay Judson, Mrs. Helen Walton, Mrs. Dudley Root, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Walker, who are the brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Szukalska.

At a party at the Tavern, given for the members of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, William C. Boyden, the new president, was proving himself the genial host. The lounge, radiating good cheer, with its cocktail bar providing the best of Martinis and "old-fashioneds," was filled with those who were congratulating Mr. Boyden as well as the Russian dancers.

Whether or no it was with forethought, the men who came to this party "sans" their wives were very much in the majority. There were the English consul general, Lewis Bernays; his good looking vice consul, Mr. Ross; Arthur Bissell, Charles F. Peterson, and Col. George T. Langhorne among them.

In the cozy little shop of the Vocational Society for Shut-Ins in the 700 block on North Michigan avenue, Mrs. John R. Hurley welcomed the members of the society's newly formed junior auxiliary, of which she is chairman. A table laden with tea service and delicious cakes stood between showcases filled with the lingerie and linens that the shop is famous for and vied with the cases for attention. Around it were several members of the board, including Mrs. Earle J. Zimmerman, the new president of the organization; Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, Mrs. H. Paul Juergens, Mrs. Frank M. Gordon, Mrs. Dewes Bergweger, and Mrs. Arthur W. Cushman.

Mrs. Hurley, the former Gwendolyn Juergens, smartly dressed in black with a lingerie ruff about the neck of her gown, explained the duties of the juniors to them . . . to help with the sales [the next one will be around the twentieth of March] by transporting goods from the shop to the place of sale and with the clerical work of sending out cards to advise the approach of the sales and to help in the shop on rush days.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Smith Barber of Evanston announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, to George Decker Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. George William Harrison, also of Evanston.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Sari Lee Katz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Katz of Mission Hills, Kansas City, to Bernard T. Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Lonston of Chicago, which took place on Jan. 31 in the home of the bride's parents, Rabbi Gershon Hadas officiating. Mr. Hoffman and his bride went to Bermuda on their wedding trip.

THE WILD BIRD

By OWEN JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS.

Barbara Brawne, aged 22, is completely dominated by an adoring, though jealous father, who is against every modern idea and improvement. Lynwood, their home, is in the prim and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of intellectual sanctity. Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinsters. Her father scares away any would-be suitors. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie Chiswick. They are mutually attracted. Barbara overhears Rance asking Laurie about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Barbara proposes to Rance. But Rance is divorced and her father hates divorce and uses this as an excuse to oppose their marriage. When Barbara determines to marry Rance regardless, her father has a stroke. Barbara fears he'll kill himself deliberately. She promises him she won't marry Rance without his consent. Gregory goes away and Barbara strives futilely to put him out of her mind. Disbrough, her father's partner, is a frequent visitor at Lynwood.

INSTALLMENT XXXIV.

FUTILITY.

"Gregory Rance?" Barbara said mechanically.

"I thought his book would interest you. You know him, don't you?"

She turned and looked at Disbrough, wondering if he were aware of the connection. She decided instantly he wasn't.

"There is no use speaking of it to my father," she said, frowning. "He wouldn't like it."

She took the package and her hand closed over it, all else forgot.

A moment later she heard him say:

"Miss Barbara, you need a little vacation."

She dragged herself with an effort out of the past and looked at him in astonishment.

"Why do you say that?"

"Because you've had a siege of it. Mind my speaking frankly?"

"Do."

"I've been watching you a long time," he said, with a little hesitation. "You're wearing yourself out. You can't go on like this indefinitely. You'll break down."

"I am very tired," she said, in a low voice.

"Any one can see that," he continued, in a matter of fact tone. "You've done a magnificent job. Your father is in good shape. Mentally he is as keen as ever. It's time you thought of yourself."

"She shook her head.

"If I went away he'd go to pieces."

"Not for a few weeks—"

"Even that—"

She took the package and her hand closed over it, all else forgot.

"But with a competent companion——"

She shook her head again.

"It's very kind of you to say this."

"Will you let me speak to him?"

She turned in astonishment.

"It isn't fair to you."

"Why?"

"He'd turn against you at once."

"He adores you." He waited. "Anything can be said in the right way."

"I do need to get away," she said, mechanically.

"Then leave it to me."

"You have no idea how all this happened?" she said, with an effort.

"No."

"I was engaged to Gregory Rance," she said, in a listless voice. "I'm telling you this because I ought to warn you. There was a dreadful scene. I was leaving the house when he had this stroke. That's why I feel so responsible."

"Gregory Rance," he said, in astonishment. "But what objection?"

"My father would have opposed any one. I know it. I am sure of it. In this case, Mr. Rance was divorced."

"O, I see." He thought a moment. "I can understand. Bad luck."

"Yes. Wasn't it?"

"I don't want to intrude—"

"I don't mind."

"But isn't there a chance of his changing?" he said, with a little eagerness.

She shook her head.

"Never. He would have died if I hadn't given him up. He would bring on another stroke—deliberately—if I tried to change him. It's completely ended."

"I'm awfully sorry." He put out his hand and then checked himself. "I understand much more now. All the more reason though for your getting away."

The horses were clattering over the bridge, the stone wall of Lynwood running beside them.

"My father is a strange person. You are taking a serious risk."

"If you'll allow me I'm going to take that risk."

"Of course I am terribly grateful," she said, with a catch in her breath.

The carriage swung into the lights of Lynwood. Mr. Brawne was waiting in the parlor. She ran up the stairs with her package of books tight in her arms.

After dinner she pretended a headache and, leaving Mr. Disbrough to substitute for her at the whist table, went to her room. She had two hours at least to herself. She hurried into bed and took up the novel, with an eagerness to return to the bitter and the sweet of her memories, knowing all the torture to which she was laying herself open. She began with a certain dread, for she had feared for months that the result to him would be a bitterness and disillusionment which would show in his work. But, from the first chapter, she was held by the strength and impersonality of the story. Whatever she had made him suffer, the suffering had been for his good. It was a story of primitive passions in a world of real men and women, thrown against a background of adventure and the clashing traditions of elemental peoples, far removed from sophisticated civilizations. At times a phrase or a point of view woke memories of their conversations. So keen was the sensation that it transported her beyond the bounds of her circumscribed life into the wide field of what life might have been had fate not interposed.

"I shouldn't have read this," she thought, miserably. "It's all going to start up again. Everything will have to be fought over again and again."

Nevertheless, she read on breathlessly, hearing his voice, feeling his presence, until a clumping on the stairs warned her of her father's approach. She hid the book under her pillow and put out the light.

"Asleep?"

"No—just dozing. I'll be in."

When Thomas had gone she put on a wrapper and came into her father's room.

"Well, you were right," he said. "Disbrough's got the Stevens case in excellent shape. Splendid legal mind, Disbrough. He'll go far."

"Yes, I think so."

She went to the window and lowered it and, coming back, bent over her father and touched her lips to his forehead. He felt instinctively the coldness in her touch.

"Bad headache, my dear?"

"Rather bad."

She stood with the candle, looking down at him. Supposing he should die in a year or two and she were free—too late? She shuddered, tormented by a recurring obsession she could not dismiss, and bending hastily, kissed him a second time.

"That's better."

"Good night."

She blew out the candle and went back to bed. She wanted to be back in Rance's world again, the world that should have been hers, but she did not dare risk discovery. The next morning, while the men were in conference, she escaped to her retreat by the bridge and returned to her book. When she had ended she sat twisting her hands, her eyes blinded, rebelling.

"I shall never get over it," she said, twisting her fingers. "Never! All the rest is futility. I shall end by hating my father, and not even that will be left to me. Nothing will be left. I shall become bitter and hard, and resent life. How terrible love is! It is suffering and slavery and desperation. I can't go on like this. I must make over my life, save something out of it. But how?"

of waiting for proper winter weather at home so they went up to Oconomowoc last week-end to enjoy the ice-boating, skating, and bobsledding. In the group were the Atkin sisters, Margot and Adelaide, E. Stanton Fetcher Jr., the Frederick W. Copelands, the T. E. Houghs, the William A. Magies, the Robert H. Gardners, the J. Mortimer Prices, and Richard P. Matthiesen. Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams, William E. Casselberry, William Templeton, and Miss Jane Valentine were among others in the party.

Holiday Party at Lake Geneva.

Quite a number of sub-debs will go to Lake Geneva today for the annual Washington's birthday anniversary party at the Northwestern Military and Naval academy for which Col. and Mrs. Davidson issued invitations two weeks ago.

Bobsleighs and automobiles will meet the guests at Walworth this morning at 10:40 o'clock and then there will be an hour of skating, iceboating, skiing and coasting, followed by the presentation of a play by the dramatic club at noon. There will be formal guard mount at 12:45 o'clock, luncheon at 1:15 and then dancing until the time for the return train to leave at 5:30.

This will be a busy day for the mothers and fathers of the pupils at the Latin School for Boys, for it is the parents' annual visiting day and disappointed indeed is the young lad whose mother or father doesn't take advantage of the opportunity to visit classes.

At the lower class assembly at 11:45 o'clock the boys of the second and third grades will give a playlet they have written themselves about the life of Washington and the fifth class boys will give a skit about the American flag.

Young Peter Connor is in charge of the playlet the second and third grade boys will give and some of those who will take part are Tracy Alden, Edson Spencer, Larry Whiting, Tommy Healy, Nelson Morris, Billy Coonley, Edwin Kretchmer and Bryan Reid Jr. At the upper school assembly at 12:20 o'clock the history department will give a program also devoted to the life of Washington.

The day's festivities will end with a double header basketball game, starting at 3 o'clock, with the boys of the North Shore Country Day school as opponents.

Daughter Born to Howard ReQuas.

The junior Charles Howard ReQuas of Geneva are being congratulated upon the birth of a daughter on Tuesday at St. Luke's hospital. This is the ReQuas' second daughter, the elder one, Suzanne, being 3 years old. Susie is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Bermingham, in Lake Forest, while her mother is in the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. ReQua lived in the west, in Santa Fé and in Colorado Springs, from the time they were married four years ago in Lake Forest until last summer, when they returned to this part of the country and took a little house on the river in Geneva.

Mrs. Orville J. Taylor and Mrs. Eugene McDonald will be leaving next week to drive to Florida. Vero Beach is Mrs. Taylor's destination and Palm Beach is Mrs. McDonald's. Both will be joined by their husbands a bit later.

Dr. Menninger Opens Lecture Series Today.

At 10 o'clock this morning in the home of Mrs. George B. Dryden at 1314 Ridge avenue, Evanston, Dr. Karl Menninger, vice president of the Institute for Psychoanalysis, will give the first of a series of three lectures sponsored by the Evanston senior center of the Infant Welfare society. Dr. Menninger will speak on "The Meaning of Psychoanalysis" and will be introduced by Dr. Ludvig Hektoen.

Mrs. Elias Lyman Jr. and Mrs. Andrew McNally are in charge of tickets for the series. After the lecture today Mrs. McNally, Mrs. John J. Louis, and Mrs. J. P. Fuller will entertain at luncheon parties at the Cradle in Evanston.

At a ceremony this afternoon in the library of the Alliance Française Mrs. Ferdinand Peck and the members and directors of the alliance will present an American flag—the one that hung over the headquarters of the American commissioners at the Paris exposition of 1900—and an engraving of Jeanne d'Arc to the French consulate. M. Jean Strauss, acting French consul in the absence of M. René Weiller, will receive the flag and engraving and in turn will give a short talk on George Washington. If Mrs. Peck, who recently celebrated her 86th birthday, is not present at the tea her daughter, Mrs. Peck Warwick, will present the flag.

Rummage Sale to Aid Hospital.

The hard working members of the women's board of the Children's Memorial hospital have decided the best way to be patriotic today is to have another of their popular rummage sales. As a result the White Elephant shop on East Ohio street will be open from early morning until late evening offering especially fine bargains in fur coat linings.

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, who takes time from her myriad interests to keep us informed of these sales, reported yesterday that her daughter Libby's plans have changed again. First Miss Chase gave up a trip to Ecuador which she had been counting on for some months and now she has given up a motor trip to Mexico City. Instead she hopes to be able to get away soon by motor to New Orleans. Her mother will most likely be her traveling companion.

President and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago left yesterday for the east to attend the wedding today in Montclair, N. J., of Miss Louise Gilman and Dr. Francis Hutchins, president of Yale-in-China and younger brother of Robert Hutchins. The Chicago Hutchinses will be back at home on Saturday. The bride and bridegroom will remain in the east until August, when they will visit Chicago on their way to China.

Reservations for Lecture by Ickes.

Making early reservations for the lecture to be given by Secretary of the Interior Ickes Saturday night in Orchestra hall, society is indicating its interest in an explanation of the "New Deal" and its future. Mr. Ickes' lecture, "The New Deal," is under the sponsorship of the Illinois and Cook County Leagues of Women Voters.

Mrs. Ickes, who has been in Springfield as a member of the Illinois house of representatives, will come to Chicago for her husband's talk. With Mr. Ickes will be the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Langworthy and afterwards occupy a place in their Orchestra hall box.

Because the Madonna Center and the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids' balls are going to be given in April—the former on April 28 and the latter on April 14—the Chicago committee of the Arden Shore association has withdrawn its plans for a large benefit in that month and plans to continue with the popular Arden Shore Thursday nights in the College Inn. These dinner dances have been held every Thursday for several months, but from now on they will be given only once a month, the next one to be a week from tonight and the one after that on April 5.

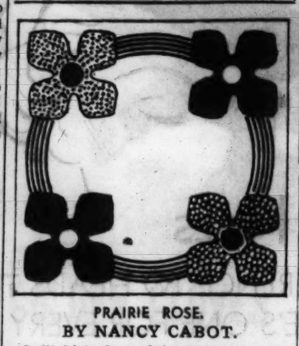
Quilt Pattern Is Variant of Theme with Many Names



PRAIRIE ROSE.
BY NANCY CABOT.

Quilt historians claim that there are not more than 300 different pieced and applique quilts in universal use, and many of these patterns are variants. For example, "Prairie Rose" is known in northern New England, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, and the far west by different names suitable to each state and region.

For a quilt pattern in this design send 5 cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Chicago Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn, and Tribune Tower.

Eyebrows Gain Beauty Through New Pencil Use

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A valuable tip on eyebrow treatment is extended to women in a current trade journal issue.

Almost invariably a girl or woman who uses eyebrow pencil draws a sharp, unbroken line from beginning to the end of intended brow. Miss Lila Rittler, makeup authority, suggests instead, working the eyebrow out with short strokes one after another along the eyebrow path, these strokes on the slant and shorter, in the middle of the line, than at its outer edges. In other words, it is really following the natural patterns of the eyebrow. It makes the eyebrow look more as if it were made of hairs than its usual look of just a pencilled line.

In the use of eye shadow and eye pencil, as well as in mascara, Miss Rittler advises letting the skin tones and eye color of the individual dictate the shade.

"For convenience," says Miss Rittler," I divide my patrons into two groups, the indeterminate and the determinate groups. The indeterminates include those women whose eyes are no definite shade, the hazels, the grey-browns and grey-blues. For this group I blend eye shadow and other makeup to correspond to the color of the dress to be worn."

With the determinate group, those with definitely blue or brown toned eyes, the makeup does not vary with the gown worn.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. Roosevelt had a large company at tea this afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider, her secretary; Mrs. James M. Helm, former social secretary to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and Miss Marguerite Le Hand, secretary to the President.

Tonight Mrs. Roosevelt occupied her box in Constitution hall for the concert of the National Symphony orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor. Mrs. Roosevelt had several guests with her, including Mrs. Scheider and Miss Le Hand.

The attorney general and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings left today for Winter Park, Fla., to remain until March 4.

The German ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, gave a tea this afternoon as a farewell to his daughter, Fraulein Gertraud Luther, who will sail shortly with Frau Koener, wife of Prof. Edmund G. Koener. The wives of the members of the embassy staff assisted the ambassador. Fraulein Luther's younger sister, Eva Marie, will sail with them, and the two girls will return to their studies, returning here next autumn.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. William A. Prime has gone to Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cromwell announce the birth of a son on Feb. 17. The child will receive the name of Seymour Le Grand Cromwell II.

Mrs. John Mitchell Reynolds Jr. gave a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton for Miss Louise Watts, whose engagement to Harold Campbell Vaughan has been announced.

Almost-Blacks Are Favorites with Chic Parisiennes

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The almost blacks have come into Paris styles to take over first place from all the other colors. They are what the name implies. Until you get close you think you are seeing black, and then the dresses you see turn out to the blackish green, bear-black red, or off-black blue. Often these frocks are trimmed, or in some way touched up with a light or gay color, as the Lucile Paray model sketched, which is an almost-black red frock and is trimmed with bright salad green.

The green appears in the surpliced bands across the front of the bodice and in the back yoke that ties between the shoulder blades. Below this yoke there is no bodice, and the bare back shows, until the surpliced bands meet just above the girdle. This girdle is wide in front and narrow to fasten under a strass buckle at the back.

The short barrel sleeves of this model are smart. They stand out stiffly in the center, held so by cording. The skirt is narrow and slinky to the knees and flared a bit below by circular cutting. It finishes with a short train at the back. The material of the dress is crêped velvet.

'Don't Touch' Edict Must Be Backed by Logic

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"No, no, baby! That's daddy's. Baby can't have daddy's pipe."

It's all right about baby not having daddy's pipe—he probably shouldn't. But not because it's daddy's—that's not the real reason.

We have to be careful in building up habits in our young children that we do it on a foundation or a principle that will still stand when they are older.

Some one was describing how successfully she had trained her small daughter in regard to touching or handling things.

"I say to her, 'No, Madelene can't have that—it's daddy's' or 'it's mother's' and then she won't touch it. All I have to say is that it's not Madeleine's or that it's mine or daddy's and she won't touch it."

Now, I think that's not wise. There are reasons why children should not handle some things, but the reason is not because they belong to somebody else in the family. We must not elevate the sense of ownership too much. Also, we are paving the way for the child's saying to us in turn, "No, you can't touch that—that's mine." We'd feel that to be both selfish and ill-natured. Yet it's just the principle on which some parents base their campaign against their little child's urge to touch.

Children should be allowed to touch and handle as many things as possible. If there are some they can't it should not be because the baby or child does not own them. Poor children, there'd be few things in the house they'd be able to lay their hands on if that were the condition. We can say, "That's daddy's and he wouldn't want it broken," or "Grandma wouldn't like to have us play with her glasses—we might lose them," or "That's sister's schoolbook and she wants to keep it clean so we'll put it back on her desk." This is a reason besides ownership.

Sardines Lend Nippy Tang to Unique Dishes

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a weekly radio feature—will be presented tomorrow by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 2 o'clock for Miss Mead's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

Sardines—thouse saucy little denizens of the deep [nice, eh?] have been flipping their silvery tails my way all week. Ran across a grand way of creaming them on toast about Monday. Tuesday they turned up again and we had some of the laddies dipped by their tails in fritter batter, then fried until they promised to be fat, hot and crunchy. Wednesday I just couldn't break my record so I eased them off to canapé size with the most gratifyingly nippy results. Thursday—ah, but today is Thursday and look what I'm doing!

SARDINE COCKTAIL.

1 lemon
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon tabasco sauce
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1-3 cup tomato catsup

Skin the sardines and bone them if necessary, separating them into small pieces. Squeeze out the juice of the lemon, strain out any seeds and mix it with the sauces and salt. Toss this with the sardines and serve them up becomingly chilly, providing a tablespoon of cocktail on a lettuce leaf in a small cocktail cup, or plate, for each diner to be appetized.

But are we dashing too rapidly? Monday's creamed sardines were such superlative items that I want you all to have a look. Probably it's about the funniest creamed sauce you ever saw sauced. Instead of the usual flour-butter-milk affair you do it this way:

CREAMED SARDINES ON TOAST.

½ cup soft white bread crums, firmly packed
2 cups evaporated milk
Salt and pepper to taste
Cayenne, just a dash
1 can sardines [1 cup prepared meat]
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Toast
Dashes of paprika

Turn the crums in to a double boiler top, follow with the milk and seasoning, and cook over boiling water until the crums are very soft. Have the sardines all ready, skinned and boned. Anoint them with the lemon juice and when ready to serve slide them into the hot sauce. Heat quickly and serve, with a gesture, over hot, buttered toast with a swirl of paprika for garnish.

And how did we maneuver the canapés? Simple. The first I tried was triangular in shape. Slice the bread thin, cutting triangles or what not from it. Toast it lightly on one side and spread with a paste of sardines which have been creamed with a little butter and seasoned with lemon juice and paprika. Sprinkle these canapés with finely minced parsley [be sure it's clean, then cut it up with the scissors]. Crown each with a slice of stuffed olive.

The wee boneless sardines are also temptingly nippy when mixed with minced cucumber and dashed with lemon juice. It's a spread proper for crisp cracker canapés, partified sandwiches for the special supper buffet, or even for the huskier bread and butter affairs the young fry take to school.

What's more, there's no law at all against sardines in salads. One of our snappiest little models this season starts with crisp lettuce leaves, atop which are slices of hard cooked egg. Crowning these are small sardines, and wandering over all of this is creamy mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with slices of lemon and bring it forth.

Next for a heartening noon time lunch:

SARDINE EGG SAVORY TOAST.

Open and drain a small can of sardines and pluck out the backbones and any other offending parts. Mash the fish together with a hard boiled egg, ¼ cup of cracker crums and seasoning to taste. Now heat a cup of rich milk or cream, add a tablespoon of butter and tumble in the rest of the ingredients. Serve it hot over toast fingers.

And, lastly, how are you on grilled foods? A sardine has a very knowing look when served up broiled upon toast and under a baptism of lemon butter. Just drain the canned fish and brown them in a skillet until heated, turning often. Serve each sardine on its own toast finger, and offer with it melted butter or butter which has been creamed and into which has been worked a little lemon juice, a tablespoon of juice to a quarter pound of butter.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

Mr. Sims is universally acclaimed the greatest living contract and auction player. He was captain of the renowned "Four Horsemen" team of four, now disbanded, and has won twenty-four national championships since 1924. These articles are based on the Sims system, which includes the one-over-one principle which the Sims group of players was the first to employ and develop.

THE OPENING BID.

IN THE previous article on this subject I dealt with hands of the defensive type and hands of a borderline nature, in first and second position.

We now have to deal with the aggressive type.

P. HAL SIMS.

The requirements are shaded for an aggressive hand.

With the aggressive type of hand I will shade my primary trick requirements, especially when I hold a two-suited hand with five-card strength in both major suits, even as low as two primary tricks, plus some slight secondary values in the long suits.

EXAMPLE:

Spades—K Q 10 x x Diamonds—x x
Hearts—A J x x x Clubs—x

With the above hand I would bid one spade.

This hand needs very little from my partner to develop a game, in fact, far less than he needs to open the bidding if I pass.

Should my partner give me a one no trump response [our weakest reply] I am not afraid to bid my second suit at a two contract, allowing him to show a preference by passing or reverting to my first suit. If his hand provides a fit for one of my suits, he may even give a raise on distributional grounds.

If the opponents overcall, I will judge from the nature of their bidding whether or not to show my second suit. It is generally dangerous to do so when vulnerable if partner has passed the first bid or overcall. When not vulnerable it is often advisable to show the second suit at two, over an adverse overcall by the player to your right.

When the two-suiter has its strength in both minors, I do not shade the bid unless the distribution is so uneven that the extremely aggressive character of the hand can be made clear to my partner only by opening the bidding.

EXAMPLE ONE:

Spades—None Diamonds—K Q 10 x x x
Hearts—Q 10 x Clubs—A Q x x x

With the above hand I would bid one diamond. The danger of an eventual misfit is remote. The probabilities are that all four hands are unevenly distributed. If my partner cannot fit either of my suits we should land in a partial score contract in hearts.

EXAMPLE TWO:

Spades—x Diamonds—K Q 10 x x x
Hearts—x Clubs—A Q 9 x x

With the above hand I would bid one diamond. The strength in this hand lies in its ability to rebid several times with comparative safety. In defense this hand cannot be relied on for more than one or at the most two tricks. Therefore, the best defense for this hand is to open the bidding.

The One-Suitor Aggressive Type Hand.

With the one-suitor hand I prefer to pass the first round. The bidding is usually opened against holdings of this kind, giving me the opportunity to bid my hand naturally and without misleading my partner.

EXAMPLE:

Spades—K Q 9 x x x Diamonds—A x x x
Hearts—x x Clubs—x

[1] If my partner opens the bidding I can freely bid and rebid to game in spades, or I can stand a high no trump contract by my partner if he bids both my weak suits.

[2] If the opponents open the bidding, I can "back in" with my long suit and even rebid it without serious risk of an excessive penalty. I have often been allowed to play hands of this type at a contract I could fulfill; sometimes doubled. Even if I am defeated a trick or two, the penalty usually is worth while, as the opponents would have been wiser to bid and score their game.

The Stage

"Double Door," announced in Erlanger theater programs for an opening here March 5 as the fourth play in the American Theater society's subscription program, is a lost hope for Chicago. The company will end its tour in Boston next Saturday.

"The Arkansaw Bear," a play for children based on a story by Albert Bigelow Paine, will be staged in the Goodman theater next Saturday afternoon. Weekly matinées will be given through March.

The Chicago Woman's club theater, headquarters for little theater groups who wish to try their luck downtown, announces performances of a play called "Ten Thirty Sharp" tonight and tomorrow night. This piece was written and staged by Peter J. Koessler, whose disciples have been active on the north side for the last ten years.

Washington's birthday matinée will be given this afternoon by "The Curtain Rises," at the Cort, and "Hold Your Horses," at the Grand Opera house.

SOUTH SIDE BOYS OPEN GOLDEN GLOVES BATTLES

100 More Fights at White City Tonight.

What's On Tonight

FOLLOWING are the facts about the semi-final round of the south section Golden Gloves tournament at White City tonight:

Time—First bouts in two rings at 7 p. m.

Admission—Sixty cents, plus tax; no seats reserved; doors open at 6 p. m.

Boxers—Open and Novice boxers report for examinations between 4 and 6 p. m.

Pairings—By lot at 6 p. m.

Number of bouts—111 in two rings.

OTHER EVENTS.

Streator Times-Press finals.
Iowa City Daily Iowan finals.

BY FRENCH LANE.

All the Golden Glove fighters in Chicago except those on the south side can sit back this morning and rest a while and gloat over their conquests or bemoan their defeats.

Three of Chicago's teams—of course they're great teams—have been picked to battle in the Tournament of Champions which opens at Chicago Stadium Monday. That's the reason there is so much resting going on today.

But out on the south side in the White City neighborhood nearly 200 boys still are tense with emotion. They are awaiting their chance to begin throwing leather covered fists. They must fight through more than 100 bouts tonight and almost half that number tomorrow night before they too can slip on their lounging robes and their bedroom slippers and really enjoy the morning paper.

Five Hours of Fighting.

There may not be any lounging robes or pink slippers or any time to rest for these south siders. Maybe all of them are from the steel mills or the brick kilns or from the big railroad car shops.

They fought that way for five hours before 2,500 spectators in 94 bouts at White City arena last night. And from the way most of the winners and losers alike dashed for home after their big minutes in the ring were over it appeared as if they might have considerable to do today before they can come back for more fighting tonight.

With the largest entry list in all the Chicago sectional meets it was only natural the south siders would make an impressive first night showing. But they did more than that. Novices performed with the skill of Open champions. Open champions looked like Jack Dempseys and Harry Grebs. Some of them who hit hard, but whose aim was a trifle faulty, looked like Kingfish Levinskys.

The striking thing about them all was that they looked like fighting men.

Hit Floor at Same Time.

Everybody perhaps has heard the story of two men knocking each other down at the same instant. The crowd at White City saw it happen last night. Tom Lean of the Blue Island Bruins was fighting Fred Tews of the Ravens Athletic club. They met head on in the second round; both swung their rights and both rights landed on chins. Down they went for nine

GOLDEN GLOVES TEAM IS PICKED ON NORTH SIDE

The capacity crowd which witnessed the climax of the North Sectional Golden Gloves tournament at Loyola university gymnasium last night is quite sure that its representatives are going to be a hard lot to beat in the Tournament of Champions which opens at the Chicago Stadium next Monday night.

One of the most thrilling battles on the 32 bout card qualified Nester Bruggman.

Bruggman, welterweight runnerup in the C. Y. O. tournament last December, was given a three round decision over Russell Nyberg of the Allerton hotel gymnasium.

Bruggman Makes Comeback.

Browning Shows Stecher He's Champion in Some States

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Jim Browning, recognized as heavyweight wrestling champion of the world in New York and California, if nowhere else, made his Chicago Stadium debut last night with a victory over Joe Stecher, a veteran of the business.

For thirty minutes the pair assembled themselves in all manner of contortions and were so earnest about their work that 5,890 customers who had paid $7,684 to see them were in a state of great unrest. It appeared the two were going to be responsible for bringing wrestling back to its pristine ruggedness. The affair bordered dangerously close to being sincere for that first half hour.

Then Stecher finally clamped a scissors on Browning near the ropes, and the latter saved the situation by emitting approved groan No. 326. Everybody breathed more easily after this close call, knowing that the ancient method of wrestling can never really displace the modern version. They immediately went into a rousing 1934 routine of punches and whinings, after which Browning concluded the match with a body scissors in 43 minutes and 8 seconds.

Script Fairly Shoddy.

In the semi-windup Everett Marshall beat Abe Coleman, a person of incredible structure, who is built so close to the ground that he baffled Marshall until Everett solved him with a half Nelson and crotch hold in 11:46.

The script for the opening number between Pat O'Shocker and Karl Davis was decidedly shoddy in spots and it appears it may have to be rewritten if the boys decided to revive it in any other member towns of the circuit. Davis was particularly lax in getting his lines across, his only contribution being a bit of chiropractic by which the he located a ticklish nerve in Pat's neck. This caused the redhead to free Karl of whatever hold he might be applying.

O'Shocker saved the show to some extent by hurdling Davis when the latter essayed a flying tackle at him. He put an end to the business with a reverse body hold in :15:50.

An International Incident.

The second portion of the evening's entertainment almost developed into an international incident when Sol Slagel, a wriggly Jewish party weighing 250 pounds, refused the handshake of Hans Kampfer, the Prussian strong man, at the start of the bout. He acted as if the German's palm contained a time bomb from Herr Hitler.

Slagel will probably be sued by George [Boo Hoo] Zaharias today for plagiarism in committing several infringements of the Zaharias copyright, including hitting his partner below the belt and carrying on a running argument with the customers. Kampfer bore up nobly, suffering like a true martyr through all of the Slagel tactics until :15:41, when he flattened Sol with a series of body slams.

Sobbing Act a Tie.

Zaharias and a lengthy Texan named Wee Willie Davis won the evening's prize for sheer suffering, both tieing Zaharias' own world record for weeping and sobbing, no small feat when you consider George as the greatest agony scene artist in wrestling. Willie matched the Colorado crybaby sniffle for sniffle and moan for moan until :16:32, when he succumbed to a crotch and chancery hold.

AH, THE WINNER!

JIM BROWNING.

PURDUE ALUMNI PROTEST OHIO'S BID FOR KIZER

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Indianapolis alumni of Purdue university were engaged tonight in battle of words with officials of Ohio State university as a result of Ohio's unsuccessful efforts to induce Noble Kizer, Purdue athletic director and football coach, to go to Columbus as coach of the Buckeye eleven.

The battle started this afternoon when the Indianapolis Alumni association, after reading a report from Columbus that Kizer would coach the Buckeyes in 1934, sent to President George W. Rightmire of Ohio State a vigorous protest against the overtures made to Kizer. The telegram to Dr. Rightmire "deplores the procedure of one or more members of one conference institution bidding for the services of one or more members of a coaching staff of another conference institution" and declared such conduct on the part of Ohio State to be "most unfair and unsportsmanlike."

Demand an Explanation.

"We would like to know," the Purdue alumni inquired, "if those in authority at Ohio State university approve or condone such as unethical. . . .

"The good name and standing of the Big Ten conference demands a prompt and frank public statement of your position."

Dr. Rightmire replied with the suggestion that had the Purdue alumni consulted Kizer or the president of their alma mater they would not have assumed that Ohio State had violated the ethics of intercollegiate relations.

Answer Rouses Wrath.

The answer only served to arouse greater wrath among the Purdue alumni, although they had learned by this time that Kizer had no intention of leaving Purdue, and they shot back another telegram to the Ohio president, reiterating their demand for a statement whether he had authorized negotiations with the Boilermaker coach. Dr. Rightmire's answer was termed "disappointing and evasive."

"We feel that a public announcement of your answer to these questions is necessary in order that Ohio State university be freed from the odium of unsportsmanlike conduct toward another member of the Big Ten conference which is certain to result if the press report which was the basis of our first telegram is true," the second message said. "We have answered your question, will you please answer ours?"

COCHRAN BEATS HOPPE, 50-39, TO TIE FOR CUE LEAD

New York, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The battle for the world's three cushion billiard title narrowed down to two players tonight when the defending champion, Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, defeated Willie Hoppe, former 18.2 balk line king, 50 to 39, to go into a tie for first place with Johnny Layton of Sedalia, Mo. The two leaders will clash in the deciding match Friday night.

In chalking up his eighth victory in ten matches in 45 rapidly played innings Cochran kept pace with Layton, ten times holder of the title, who hung up his eighth triumph, as compared with two setbacks, in beating J. N. Bozeman Jr. of Vallejo, Cal., 50 to 27, in the afternoon.

Hoppe Can Tie for Fourth.

The defeat, Hoppe's fourth in ten starts, left the former boy wonder where the best he can do is a tie for fourth place. To attain that position he must beat Bozeman tomorrow night. It is the lowest Hoppe has finished in the three tournaments in which he has participated since giving up balk line competition in 1928.

From the time Cochran opened up with a run of three and then added a high cluster of six in the second inning Hoppe found himself fighting an uphill battle. The one time king of the balk line players fought back courageously, however, and battled his way into a 29 to 25 lead at the end of the 28th inning.

Hoppe Has High Run of 10.

The high point of Hoppe's rally came in the 25th inning, when he clicked off 10 points in rapid succession. That was the only time, however, that the 46 year old cue master showed his form of other years.

Cochran answered the challenge with a great exhibition. Trailing by one point when he stepped to the table for the 32d time, the Californian reeled off five points to take a lead which he never relinquished.

Featuring a run of four in the 34th, a group of three in the 37th, and his second cluster of five in the 38th, Cochran stepped rapidly toward his objective of 50 points. The rally netted him 23 points in the last 14 innings, while the best Hoppe could do during the same period was 11 caroms.

CAREY, SIGNED FOR 1934, TOLD HE IS THROUGH

Prospective Pilot on Way East.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Max Carey was relieved of the managership of the Brooklyn Baseball club today in the first significant move made by the McKeever and Ebbets interests to put their disorganized house in order.

Casey Stengel can have the job if he wants it, it was stated in well informed quarters. Casey is en route from Glendale, Cal., and will be offered the post when he arrives in New York tomorrow evening or early Friday morning. If Stengel turns down the manager's job, another active player on the team will be considered, but he definitly will not be Marty McManus, named as coach for the 1934 season.

Quinn Makes Announcement.

Bob Quinn, business manager of the Dodgers, who is battling a touch of grippe in a sick bed at a local hotel, made these announcements today to culminate a bitter wave of public opinion against Carey, manager in 1932 and 1933. Carey signed a contract for 1934 last August, and the Brooklyn club will have to pay his full salary—an estimated $12,500—if he fails to land another position. If Carey signs with another team at a lower figure, Brooklyn will be obliged to pay him the difference between the two salaries.

Judge Stephen W. McKeever, president of the club, also confined to his bed by illness, communicated with Carey at Miami this morning and broke the bad news to him.

Quinn said that he confidently expects Stengel to take the post. Last summer, when the movement to oust Carey first gained impetus, Stengel was offered the job, but turned it down out of loyalty to Carey. Now Carey is through and Stengel can assume leadership of the Dodgers with a clear conscience.

For Best Interests of Team.

The extremely popular Stengel is regarded as the best possible choice to bring the fans back to Ebbets field and again make the Brooklyn franchise one of the most profitable in baseball.

Stengel was a successful minor league manager with Toledo of the American association from 1926 through 1930. His 1928 team gave Toledo its first and last championship club.

Both Carey and Stengel were outfielders during their active careers.

DON'T MAKE A TOPER OF YOUR HORSE: CAREY

Illinois Won't Tolerate Alcoholic Stimulants.

If you own a race horse and don't care to stimulate him with narcotics and thus get Uncle Sam's men on your trail, don't try to make a booze hound out of the old nag in an effort to spur him on to greater racing efforts.

The new Illinois racing commission won't stand for it in this state, Peter B. Carey, chairman of the commission, told reporters at a press conference late yesterday afternoon.

Use Liquor for Pep.

"We have reports from some of the winter tracks that a few trainers who have become afraid to 'dope' their horses with narcotics have been using whisky, brandy, gin, and even a piping hot cup of coffee to put more life into their lazy steeds," Mr. Carey said.

"The rules the Illinois racing commission will adopt, will prevent the use of a stimulant of any kind. In other words, the diet for a horse which races on any track in Illinois will be oats, hay and water," Mr. Carey continued. "The discovery of anything in the stable where race horses are quartered that might be considered as a stimulant will be evidence enough to cause disbarment from racing in the state."

Mr. Carey, president of the Board of Trade as well as chairman of the state racing commission, said he hadn't found it convenient to visit a Chicago race course within the last three years. "I did go to the races in Florida the other day, and thought I could pick some winners, but I couldn't. It cost me a few dollars but not more than any other sort of an afternoon's entertainment would have cost me. I don't think any one should lose more at a race track than they can afford to spend for a day's entertainment.

They're Not Turfmen.

"I've never owned a race horse nor have I ever owned stock in a race track, so I have no axes to grind and neither have Mr. Spitz nor Mr. Peacock, the other members of the commission," he concluded.

The new racing commission held an informal meeting on Tuesday night and will hold another session on Friday to complete its organization work.

Mr. Carey announced that George Foster, Chicago attorney, had been appointed secretary of the commission.

"These licenses will be granted or refused sometime between March 1 and March 15, Mr. Carey said. "If the tracks cannot agree on dates that will not conflict we will hold a hearing before such dates are adopted," he said.

The offices of the new racing commission will be located in the Morton building which houses numerous other state departments. It may be opened as early as next Monday.

RED SOX SEND DALE ALEXANDER TO JERSEY CITY

Boston, Mass., Feb. 21.—(AP)—In 1932 Dale Alexander of the Red Sox led the American league in batting, but he slipped to such an extent last year that he was sent back to the minors today.

The large and slow first baseman goes to Jersey City of the International league and in return for two young pitchers, James McCloskey and John Merena. No cash was involved. The deal set up a working agreement between the Red Sox and the Jersey City club.

Alexander wound up on the bench last season. He hit .281 in 94 games.

Move to Strip Jocky Club of Racing Control

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—John Hay Whitney, prominent member of the Jocky club, was informed here today by Democratic Senate Leader John J. Dunnigan that a bill would be introduced here Monday to strip the Jocky club of control of racing in the state.

Whitney, one of the leading owners of stables racing on the New York tracks, held a long conference with the Democratic senate leader, who produced a profound shock in racing circles with his savage attack on racing conditions under Jocky club control.

Commission to Get Full Power.

With William Woodward, chairman of the Jocky club, on record as denying vehemently the Dunnigan charges, Whitney and Senator Dunnigan reviewed the entire situation, involving the effort to pass legislation this year to permit open betting at the tracks through the Crawford-Herman bill.

Senator Dunnigan was understood to have told Whitney that the bill to set up a new racing commission with greatly enlarged powers would be ready to go into the senate on Monday night. Senator Dunnigan will sponsor it.

Senator Dunnigan's bill, it was understood, would establish a racing commission of either three or five paid members, who would have complete direction of racing in the state.

Club to Keep Records.

"The control would follow the lines set up in the Maryland system," said Senator Dunnigan. "The Jocky club would keep the breeding records and the stud book."

Otherwise, it was made clear, administration of racing under the prospective Dunnigan bill would be lodged in the new racing commission.

Secretary of State Flynn is in Florida and the members of the present racing commission had not sent any word to his office here up to late tonight. The belief was indicated, however, that word would be obtained by tomorrow as to what the racing commission members planned to do.

Denounce Dunnigan.

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Scores of communications continued to reach the Jocky club today from persons in New York and in many other states, denouncing the attack of Senator John J. Dunnigan on New York racing. John Price Hyatt, well known amateur sportsman from Wilmington, wrote urging the Jocky club to come to Delaware.

Joseph A. Murphy, active last year in the formation of race courses and the administration of the sport in Michigan, Texas, and California, wrote "Politics is the curse of racing."

RIBBONS BATTLE RUTHS TONIGHT IN THIRD GAME

The Baby Ruths and the Blue Ribbons will meet at the Coliseum in the third of a five game series for the championship of the Chicago Amateur Hocky association tonight. The Baby Ruths were victorious in the first two games of the series, 4 to 3 and 5 to 4. A triumph tonight would give them the championship.

PLAN A. A. F. SWIM MEET.

The swimming committee of the Amateur Athletic federation will meet tomorrow at the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard, to discuss plans for the 24th annual swimming meet.

HAWKS BATTLE AMERICANS AT STADIUM TONIGHT

Seek Revenge Against Improved New Yorkers.

Once upon a time the New York Americans used to come to town to play the Blackhawks, and were always considered a very soft touch for the Chicagoans, even though they were recognized as one of the fightingest teams in the National Hocky league. Such, however, is not expected to be the case tonight, when the two meet at the Stadium for their second combat within three nights.

The Hawks themselves are well aware of the change that has come over the New Yorkers within recent weeks, the Americans supplying them ample proof by handing them at 3 to 1 whipping at Madison Square Garden Tuesday night.

Half Game Back of Canadiens.

If there be any doubt that the Americans, who started the season at their one time losing pace, are not the most improved team in the league, it is only necessary to consult the standing at this writing. The star spangled team for a month has been dueling with the Montreal Canadiens for third place and a berth in the Stanley cup playoffs. They are now in fourth place, a half game back of the Frenchmen, who play the Maroons at Montreal tonight.

Still another item in the Americans' amazing progress is the fact that they won four out of five games played against the world champion Rangers for the New York City title, the first time they accomplished the feat in eight years. They handed Boston three straight defeats and twice held the potent Maple Leafs to ties, testimony to the work of Goalie Roy Worters and a highly developed defensive system.

Rabbit McVeigh Their Hero.

Not the least of the visitors will be an old Blackhawk, Rabbit McVeigh, diminutive wing who has been the scoring star of the Americans in their battle to gain the playoffs. In a season which has witnessed brilliant individual work by such as Lionel Conacher of the Hawks, Nels Stewart of Boston, Frank Boucher of the Rangers, King Clancy of Toronto, and Hooley Smith of the Maroons, McVeigh is easily the 1934 hero of the New York team.

McVeigh is a leading candidate for the Byng and Hart trophies, the former for sportsmanship and the latter for the player adjudged to be most valuable to his team. Incidentally Worters, the Americans' guardian, is the only goalie ever to have received the Hart award.

Notre Dame Is 28-19 Victor Over Spartans

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Notre Dame held Michigan State to three field goals for a 28 to 19 victory tonight. The Spartans had previously held Notre Dame to a one point triple overtime victory.

Coach George Keogan gave the capacity crowd of 6,000 fans an advance showing of his next years' team, using Capt. Ed [Moose] Krause and Leo Crowe, seniors, only the first half. The score was 17 to 8 at the half.

Offense Moves Faster.

The Notre Dame offense, in which scoring was almost evenly divided among five men, moved much faster than it did against Pitt here Saturday, and its defense was almost impregnable. State's three baskets came on a long side shot by Patchett, a follow-up shot by Van Fassen and a short shot by Vanderroest.

Joe O'Kane, junior, and Johnny Ford, Indianapolis sophomore, displayed aggressive defensive work in the first half. Marty Peters, 6 foot 3 inch sophomore center from Peoria, monopolized play in the second half, scoring five points.

Vanderroest Scores for Spartans.

Michigan State's first field goal came in the first half when Vanderroest slipped in a short side shot. Notre Dame had taken a 12 to 4 lead previous to this.

The Spartans rallied on free throws late in the game, making the count 26 to 19 with only a few minutes of play remaining. The Irish controled the ball the rest of the route.

DAVENPORT AND ROCK ISLAND JOIN WESTERN LEAGUE

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Pueblo and Denver were dropped as members of the Western league, and Rock Island and Davenport were given franchises at a special league meeting held here today with President Dale Gear presiding. Pueblo was uncertain of being able to operate and Denver was dropped because of excess mileage.

Rock Island and Davenport were members of the Mississippi Valley league last year. Cedar Rapids was invited to join the reorganization and will give its answer Feb. 28 at a special meeting in Des Moines. Peoria, Ill., and Sioux City are also considering joining, to make it an eight team league. Present members are St. Joseph, Des Moines, Topeka, Omaha, Rock Island, and Davenport.

Cards Send Spencer to Columbus; Collins Signs

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Virgil Davis, the big catcher obtained by the Cardinals in the trade which sent Jimmy Wilson to the Phillies as manager, signed his 1934 contract here today. James [Ripper] Collins, regular first baseman, also signed, it was announced, and Glenn Spencer, who was obtained from the Cincinnati Reds in the Bob O'Farrell trade, has been sent to Columbus of the American association on option.

NEW CUB SCOUT AND FIND

Kewanee Girl Is Willing to Scout for Cubs

Kewanee, Ill., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Miss Florence Norman, physician's attendant and baseball scout betimes, is ready to accept a permanent position with the Chicago Cubs to seek left handed pitchers, if they'll offer it. When Don Conrads, 21 year old southpaw, leaves Kewanee for Catalina on March 1, Miss Norman will start another search for talent to prove that the hardy males who hold down high salaried jobs for doing such things aren't the only persons able to spot Cubs' material.

Regarding the permanent job of scouting, however, the Kewanee girl reconsiders to say, "Probably I wouldn't do because I get too excited at the games. I yell all the time and my voice doesn't hold out."

Drives to See Games.

Miss Norman has the right to be classified as Kewanee's most rabid Cub fan for she has driven her own car 140 miles each way on week-ends and on her Thursday afternoons off to see more than sixty Cubs' games in the past six years, not counting world series contests. She knows most of the Cubs' players personally, together with Vice President John O. Seys.

Miss Norman discovered Don Conrads last summer as he pitched for a team in the Kewanee City Baseball league and then her barrage of letters began.

"It's a wonder Mr. Says didn't pitch me out of the ball park, I pestered him so much. Sometimes I wrote him twice a week and at last he listened.

Continuing her sales talk, the feminine scout—light brunette, five feet, four inches tall, and weighing 112 pounds—persuaded Says to let her bring the Kewanee southpaw into Chicago last fall. There the youth met the Cubs' officials together with Jack Lelivelt, Los Angeles manager, and helped to sell himself for the unusual chance of making a training trip without even pitching a game of professional ball.

Works Out Daily.

He is working out daily in the Y. M. C. A. gym at Kewanee and will have his arm in shape by March 1. His greatest worry is his thinness, but Vice President Says has assured him that the fattening process with the baseball diet of steaks and cream at Catalina island will make it easy.

Will the Cubs win the pennant, Miss Norman was asked. They certainly will, declared Conrad's discoverer today. She picks New York and Pittsburgh to be fighting it out with the Bruins for the league lead.

And if the Kewanee southpaw shows the "stuff" that his sponsor believes he possesses, there's no doubt that Miss Florence Norman, 139 Tenney street, Kewanee, will have a ringside seat with no questions asked.

YALE'S SEXTET TRIUMPHS OVER PRINCETON, 3 TO 1

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—The Yale hocky team tonight won its first hocky series from Princeton since 1931, repeating last Saturday's victory, 3 to 1.

Princeton took 26 shots to 8 for Yale in the second and third periods as it played a five man attack in a desperate endeavor to even the score, but the work of Goalie Johnny Snyder and bad luck on many of the shots prevented the Tigers from counting more than one goal, that more than midway through the third period, when Yale was leading, 3 to 0.

As a result of the game Yale went into a tie with Dartmouth for first place in the Quadrangular Hocky league, passing Princeton, which dropped to third.

Stadium Will Hold Boxing Card March 21

The next boxing show at the Chicago Stadium yesterday was set tentatively for March 21. Nate Lewis, matchmaker, had planned to offer a card on March 16, but when it was learned that the date was not available because of the six day bicycle race, he made the change.

Lewis is negotiating for a 15 round middleweight title bout between Champion Vince Dundee and Jimmy McLarnin, welterweight king. The middleweight titleholder already has accepted terms and indications are that McLarnin will sign.

In the event that the match fails to materialize a card headed by three fights at 10 rounds each probably will be offered. Two of them may bring together Lou Brouillard, former welterweight and middleweight titleholder, and George Nichols, who was dethroned as light heavyweight champion last year, and Harry Dublinsky and Bep Van Klaveren, welterweights. Kid Leonard, East Moline, Ill., and Frank Battaglia, Winnipeg, Man., also are to appear on the program.

Young Terry, Davenport, Ia., lightweight, is to finish drills at a loop gymnasium today for his six round main event with Frank Sigilio of the west side at Cicero stadium Friday. Sigilio did his last boxing yesterday by going two rounds each against Danny Neenan and Steve Pajdo.

De Paul Beats Armour Tech Five, 43 to 41

Free throws by Linskey and Barskis gave De Paul a 43 to 41 victory in overtime play over Armour Tech yesterday afternoon in the Armour gymnasium. It was De Paul's thirteenth consecutive victory.

Aside from Ray Pflum, who played guard for Tech, the Demons had an edge in the play. However, Pflum's individual efforts constantly imperiled De Paul, and it was because of his seven baskets that De Paul trailed up to the final few seconds of the regulation play. Then Adams tied the score at 38 to 38 with a free throw just as the whistle blew.

Hicke scored six baskets and one free throw. Pflum made his total points 16 by dropping in a couple of free throws. Weston, De Paul center, was forced out of the game on personals for the first time in his basketball career. Lineup:

FOOTBALL CHANGES.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Feb. 21.—Recent amendments to the football code, adopted by the rules committee liberalizing forward passing are more important in their probability of strengthening other attacks than of stimulating forward passing, which already had a powerful place in offense.

This change will affect goal line defense or last ditch stands particularly. Since the first incompleted pass into the end zone no longer causes a touchback and loss of the ball, field generals will give the pass even more action in that territory. Consequently the defense must spread to meet it or run the risk of a completed pass for touchdown. With the defense spread, there will be more opportunities to cross the opposition with end runs or line thrusts. That decidedly is a step in the right direction.

Much as The Wake enjoys a finely executed forward pass, whether or not it results in a touchdown run, we enjoy more the thrill of running play with its interference and fine blocking. Removal of the touchback restriction and also the 5 yard penalty for two incompleted passes in the same series will tend to promote the running game, according to most commentators.

If so, that will meet criticism that defense has outstripped attack. This criticism seemed somewhat merited in the Big Ten where other elevens to combat the Michigan "punt, pass and prayer" tactics were forced to adopt the same type of game in order to hope for victory because of the effective Michigan defense.

Nor does The Wake think the forward pass attack, especially when combined with laterals, has reached anywhere near its greatest possibilities. Pros, especially the Chicago Bears, with their precision and execution proved that.

Some critics fear the changes will minimize the heroic goal line defenses which have been the high spots of many low score or scoreless contests. Perhaps so. But positive rather than negative action is more popular with the public.

BURDICK SIGNS TO COACH KNOX FOOTBALL TEAM

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Lloyd S. Burdick, former University of Illinois tackle, today was appointed football coach at Knox college.

Burdick, who was graduated from Illinois in 1930 after playing three seasons at tackle, was a member of the Chicago Bears of the National Professional Football league and last year played with the Cincinnati club.

GRABINER, FOUR SOX ROOKIES GO TO CAMP TONIGHT

Main Party Off One Week from Today.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

A modest assemblage of four athletes and one club official will hop westward tonight as the first step in the White Sox spring training affairs for 1934. The quartet of players, all rookies who may or may not be heard from in the future, will depart at 8:45 p. m. on the Golden State limited for Pasadena, Cal., where the conditioning business will be going full blast next week under the direction of Manager Lew Fonseca. The four tourists from here will be looked after en route by Harry Grabiner, vice president of the club.

The four starting on the spring venture from Chicago will be Catcher John Pasek, formerly of the Tigers; John Huck, a local semi-pro pitcher; John Pomorski, a pitcher purchased from the Montreal club, and Milton Bocek, a Cicero lad who in a few games last fall acted as if he might develop into a hitting outfielder.

Main Squad Leaves in Week.

The main squad of Sox notables, a group made up of the fellows who don't have to get out early and show their real worth, will leave from here a week from tonight, accompanied by President Louis Comiskey and Joe Barry, traveling secretary.

Fonseca's early squad of rookies will open work in a serious way next Monday morning. The party will be made up of 12 athletes, including Manager Fonseca and Coach Jimmy Austin. Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes are already in the neighborhood of the Pasadena camp and probably will go to work immediately, although their orders do not call for their presence in uniform until March 5.

Only a few members of the Sox personnel remain unsigned and whether any holdouts develop will not be known until Manager Fonseca counts noses on the day designated as deadline.

Thirty in Cub Party.

Nearly 30 will be in the Cub training trip delegation leaving here a week from tonight for the Catalina Island training base. Not many athletes will be present for the getaway, because many of the veterans already are in California. Among those leaving from here will be Clarence Rowland, former White Sox manager, who is a Cub scout. Rowland, along with Scout Jack Doyle, will assist Manager Grimm in the job of sifting the talent before the training effort is concluded. Grimm will arrive in Chicago next Monday morning.

SWEDISH PRINCE DEFIES FAMILY; TO WED FOR LOVE

Plans to Marry Actress Next Month.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Prince Sigvard, 26 year old son of Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden turned up in London today with Fraulein Erika Patzek, German film actress, and the prince intends to stay in London until he has married Fraulein Patzek.

This much was certain. Although the prince refused to divulge any details, he made it plain that neither the disapproval of his family nor the loss of his royal prerogatives can frighten him into breaking his betrothal to his blonde, petite, and attractive fiancée.

Even Count Folke Bernadotte, nephew of King Gustav of Sweden, who came here recently as an emissary of the crown prince to dissuade Sigvard from marrying a commoner, became convinced that the prince knew his own mind today. So he returned by plane to Stockholm.

May be Wed March 8.

The marriage ceremony is expected to be performed on March 8 at the Caxton hall registry office, but the prince would not confirm this. The romantic royal rebel was discovered in a modest little hotel tucked away in Saint James's place, one of the side streets off Piccadilly. He had registered there as plain Oscar Sigvard. [If he goes through with the marriage his family announced last night he would become plain Mr. Bernadotte.]

"I am very sorry but at this moment I cannot say anything concerning my visit to London," the prince said to newspaper men. "If I were to say anything I might cause a misunderstanding or complicate matters. I think a man's private life is his own affair."

The prince and his bride-to-be had luncheon in a fashionable west end restaurant today with his attorney, George Gordon of the firm of Messrs. Gordon and Dadds, which is also handling Lord Ashley's divorce suit in which Douglas Fairbanks, film star, is named as co-respondent.

The prince is well aware that if he marries the German girl he will forfeit his royal rights as did his cousin, formerly Prince Lennart, now known as Mr. Lennart Bernadotte, who married the daughter of a Stockholm industrialist in 1932. The prince, however, a very determined young man, said he is ready to give up everything for love.

Fiancée Plays Minor Parts.

His fiancée is little known in the film world because she has acted only minor parts at the UFA studios in Berlin. She comes from a middle class German family, now moderately wealthy. She speaks only German and spent 10 years of her life in a Catholic convent.

The prince, too, has been employed with the UFA company in Berlin under the name of Herr Holger. The couple plan to resume their film work after their marriage.

The pair intended to marry in Berlin, but could not get the necessary papers, so they hurried to London.

Fraulein Patzek is stopping at a woman's club in London and is with her brother. The latter is staying at the same hotel as the prince. It was stated today the girl's parents will arrive from Berlin soon to help with wedding arrangements.

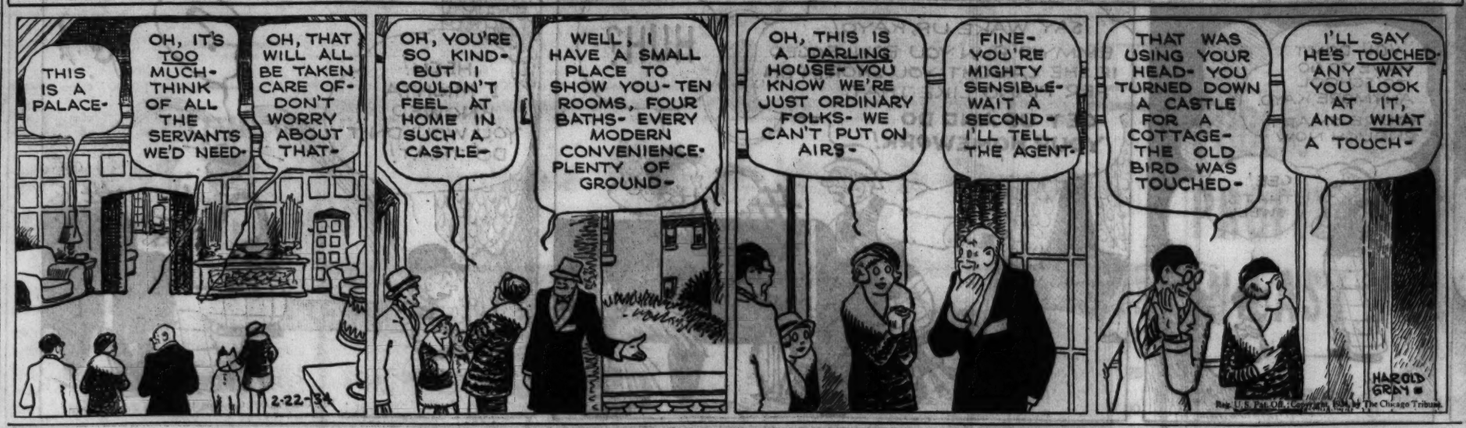
THE "FIRST" BERNADOTTE.

The Swedish royal family of Bernadottes is itself of comparatively recent commoner origin. It began with Jean Baptiste Jules Bernadotte, son of a French procurator at Pau. Jean, a. m. who was born in 1763, entered the French army, became an efficient general under Napoleon and also one of the 18 marshals of the empire.

In 1810 Sweden, finding herself without an heir to the throne of the aged King Charles XIII., surprisingly elected Bernadotte to the post of crown prince. This action was taken because of Bernadotte's kindly treatment of Swedish prisoners in the late war with Denmark and because the nation was in the market for an able military commander to fight a prospective war with Russia.

Bernadotte accepted and accordingly was adopted as a son by Charles XIII. Upon the latter's death in 1818 the French general became king as Charles XIV.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Touching



DEFENSE WITNESS SAYS DR. KENNEDY'S DEATH SEEMED NORMAL

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Expert was pitted against expert today in the murder trial of Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, 33 year old baby specialist. Her attorneys put two physicians and a college chemist on the stand to combat the state charge that Dr. John Preston Kennedy's death last August was caused by mercurial poisoning.

On several points dealing with Kennedy's illness, the defense testimony was directly contradictory to that for the state in its attempt to show that Dr. Dean poisoned Dr. Kennedy with a whisky highball.

Dr. A. E. Gordin, consulting physician, had made numerous examinations of Kennedy when he was dying. Dr. Gordin repeated on the stand today his previous testimony that he did not believe Kennedy was suffering from mercurial poisoning, but from acute nephritis. Dr. Gordin described himself as only a casual acquaintance of Dr. Dean, but "a good friend" of the Kennedy family and of Dr. W. F. Hand, the physician in charge of the case.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, 67, a college chemist, testified he had made two analyses of Kennedy's stomach contents during Kennedy's fatal illness and found "no trace of mercurial poisoning or any other metallic poisoning."

Letters were read indicating a love affair between Dr. Kennedy and Dr. Dean.

MAYOR 'CRACKS DOWN' ON NEW YORK HOTELS IN STRIKE OF WORKERS

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special.]—Mayor F. H. La Guardia's threat to "crack down" on New York City hotels which have refused to negotiate with the Amalgamated Hotel and Restaurant Workers' union was being carried out today.

Parties of health department inspectors descended on several of the largest hostelries and began minutely detailed examinations of employés, food supplies, and sanitary conditions.

At the Waldorf-Astoria, where the strike began on Jan. 26 with the discharge of an underchef, it was said that the inspectors ordered waiters, chefs, and other employés to leave their jobs and compelled them to submit to physical examinations. Each employé, a representative of the management said, had been reëxamined, no matter how recent the date of issue of his health department food handler's card.

The Hotel Roosevelt issued a statement that 30 of its employés had been summoned to Yorkville court on Friday morning, charged with not having food handlers' cards. It blamed the hotel raids on "complaints made to the mayor by striking waiters and cooks."

SEEK INSURANCE ON M. W. LORCH, MISSING 7 YEARS

A petition for a court order to establish legally the death of Melbert W. Lorch, former head of a produce brokerage house bearing his name, who disappeared in Chicago on Oct. 3, 1926, was filed yesterday before Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to the probate judge. A brother and sister of Lorch are seeking letters of administration to collect $250,000 from insurance policies on Lorch's life.

Under Illinois law heirs are entitled to institute such proceedings in the Probate court after the elapse of seven years. Lorch's heirs are Mrs. Wilma B. Morris, 944 East 52d street, his sister, and Harry S. Lorch, 7020 Jeffery avenue, his brother. Their petition is opposed by counsel for five insurance companies in which he held policies.

According to statements made to the court yesterday Lorch disappeared after he had lost large sums of money while speculating in onions. His automobile and several notes in which he stated that he was tired of life were found beside the Jackson boulevard bridge. Authorities dragged the river, but his body was never recovered. Insurance representatives, however, asserted that Lorch has been seen in Mexico and Honolulu since his disappearance.

IMPROVEMENT CONTINUES IN TRADE: DAWES

Believes Budget Will Be Balanced.

Sporting the underslung pipe which has been seen infrequently in public lately, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President of the United States, appeared yesterday before a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce to express the view that improvement in business and industry is continuing in this country.

GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES.

The Chicago banker was substituting for Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who was scheduled to give an address which in some quarters was expected to shed some light on the administration's silver plans.

"In my judgement," Gen. Dawes said, "we are facing continued better conditions in business and industry in this country. I predicate this on my belief that the President will carry out his announced program of a balanced budget in 1936.

"I believe he will withstand the tremendous political pressure on him to continue emergency expenditures after emergencies have passed. He dos not strike me as a man who is afraid."

Doesn't Fear Big Debt.

Assuming that the budget is balanced, we need have no fear of the 10 billion increase in the public debt, he asserted. Great Britain, whose credit is good, has a gross public debt of $865 per capita, while the combined federal, local, and state gross debt in this country is only $352.66, he said.

The failure of bank loans to show an expansion in the early stages of recovery is not unusual, but follows the pattern of other depressions, he added. He dated the beginning of the return of confidence with the bank moratorium, and said that October will probably mark the start of the new business cycle.

Bank loans are the result, not the cause of reviving business, he declared. People draw first on their own resources and then go to the banks for funds when their own have been reduced, he said.

Stresses Mass Confidence.

The former vice president stressed what he called the "importance of mass confidence" which he said shifts in accordance with some underlying law of human nature. It arises not from mass intelligence but from mass feeling, he declared, and conclusions must be adjusted to it.

Citing the velocity of bank deposits as a reflection of confidence he pointed out the events of 1926, the year which is now considered "normal."

In 1926 the estimated average of deposits subject to checking was $25,570,000,000, which showed a velocity of 27.2 times, making an estimated volume of check payments of $695,000,000,000. He contrasted this with 1921, a year of low confidence, when $19,630,000 of deposits showed a turnover of 24 7-10 times or an estimated volume of check payments of $484,000,000.

Increase in Billions.

Including actual currency the payments in 1921 were 581 billions while in 1926 total payments had swelled to 800 billions.

"This power of mass confidence," the banker said, "practically unaided by government stimulation, and with only an increase in money circulation of $400,000,000, in five years from 1921 to 1926 increased national purchasing power in the shape of additional individual bank deposits by 5 billions 940 millions and increased the annual volume of payments by check by 219 millions."

The Dawes requiem on the depression marked his first public speech since he retired from public life two years ago with his resignation as chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Steel Output at 44½%; Was 19% a Year Ago

Sustained by automotive demand and to a lesser extent by business resulting from the railroads' rehabilitation, steel works operations rose again last week 3½ points to 44½ per cent of capacity, according to the Iron Age. The rate is now 25½ points above that of a year ago.

Compensating for some higher costs due to code regulations by greater economies from bigger volume producers have filed few important changes in prices for next quarter. In fact, sharp reductions in hot rolled strip and sheet steel, used mainly by the automotive industry, were announced yesterday by the American Iron and Steel institute. Books for second quarter deliveries will be opened on March 1.

Auto Makers Seek Steel.

The anxiety of motor car makers to cover present requirements has developed a "decided sellers' market" for cold finished sheets, reports the Iron Age. Manufacturers of automatic refrigerators have augmented the demand for sheets. The mills are so abundantly booked that one producer recently declined an order for 1,000 tons. Business in strip is also heavy, but to a lesser degree.

Hampered by shortages in material the production of motor vehicles remained about the same as last week's.

"Stamping plants in southern Michigan are booked to capacity with the overflow from automobile works and in the Chicago district malleable iron shops, already well engaged by automotive orders, have had to refuse railroad business," reports the review.

Seek Bids on Tools.

Some automobile companies are so sanguine about prospects of business that they are estimating their tooling programs for next year. Bids on tools and equipment for 6 to 8 million dollars are expected from one concern within the next few weeks. Ordinarily such orders are not placed until July or August. According to the Iron Age, there will be an output of at least 3 million cars in 1934.

Orders for rails so far placed under the Eastman plan aggregate 330,000 tons, to which 270,000 are to be added under the original allotment of public works administration funds. The price of $36.37½ per ton for rails now in effect will expire March 1 unless the producers take prior action.

Last week's awards of structural steel totaled 14,925 tons, against 11,650 in the preceding week.

Consumption of Lake Superior ore during January was 1,656,303 tons, compared with 661,116 in January, 1933.

The Iron Age's composite for scrap has risen from $12.08 to $12.25. The indexes for finished steel and pig iron are unchanged.

Youngstown Up to 54 Per Cent.

Youngstown, O., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Steel production in the Youngstown district rose to 54 per cent of capacity today with the addition of two more open hearth furnaces to the active list.

NATIONAL TEA NET UP 23½% IN '33; $1.70 A SHARE

Although its sales fell 1.04 per cent in 1933 profits of the National Tea company rose 23½ per cent during the period compared with the preceding year. This was disclosed in the company's annual report released last night by George Rasmussen, president.

Net profit was $1,180,390 last year, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.70 a share on 644,953 common shares outstanding. Profit was $899,054 in 1932, equivalent to $1.30 a share on 627,736 common shares after preferred dividend provisions. Sales last year aggregated $64,973,576 against $65,657,249 in the preceding year, a decrease of 1.04 per cent. The shrinkage was less than the 2.4 per cent decline in retail food prices reported for the period by the bureau of labor statistics.

"The company continues in a splendid cash position, with no bank loans," said Mr. Rasmussen. The company reported current assets of $9,798,988 against current liabilities of $2,666,849 at the year end. Quick assets included cash of $1,423,182 and government securities of $1,283,381 which have market value of $1,266,987.

At the close of 1933 the company was operating 1,299 stores of which 372 were combination meat and grocery shops. A year previous the company was operating 1,389 units of which 302 were of the combination variety.

BOOST RETAIL GAS PRICE 1 CENT; CUT WHOLESALE RATE

Retail gasoline prices will be increased 1 cent a gallon tomorrow by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, while the company will lower its tank wagon, or wholesale price, 1 cent a gallon. The company stated the price changes involve "a long deferred adjustment of service station prices to bring them more nearly into line with increased costs.

"Lowering of the tank wagon price will establish it on the basis recently prescribed by the planning and coordination committee under the oil code," the company stated. "The tank wagon price has previously been the same as the service station price, but quantity buyers have been allowed a discount."

Chicago retail prices will be 20.3 cents, 18.3 cents and 16.3 cents.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—All sources of internal revenue showed heavy increases during the first seven months of the present fiscal year as compared with the same period of 1933, with the exception of corporate income taxes, the treasury announced today.

Total receipts for the seven months' period ended Jan. 31 amounted to $1,397,950,474, a gain of $566,708,061 as compared with the year before.

Income taxes totaled $332,685,028, a loss of $28,371,286. These receipts included $171,910,513 in corporation taxes, a reduction of $50,760,325, and individual taxes of $160,774,513, an increase of $22,389,038.

Miscellaneous internal revenue amounted to $881,389,784, a gain of $411,203,686. The processing taxes on farm products totaled $183,875,661.

Liquor Brings in 120 Millions.

For the seven months the government's collection of taxes on distilled spirits, wines, and beers amounted to $120,547,399, as compared with $4,379,586 in the same 1932 period.

Beer headed the liquor taxes with $83,680,727, which was a net gain. In January, following the seasonal tendency, the beer taxes fell off about $2,000,000. Total liquor taxes for January of $22,132,895 also were about $2,000,000 below December.

The distilled spirits tax for the seven months was $24,198,587, as compared with $3,883,124 the year before. The distilled spirits tax in December, the first month when the production of whisky was legalized since repeal of the 18th amendment, amounted to $8,651,258.

Classes of Liquor Tax.

For the seven months the distilled spirits rectification tax amounted to $2,427,064, virtually a net gain over the year before. The bulk of this tax was collected in December and January. The tax on wines and cordials for the seven months was $1,679,730 and that collected from rectifiers, retail and wholesale liquor dealers and manufacturers of stills $3,413,688, as compared with $333,016 in 1932.

Tobacco taxes proved, as usual, the chief source of revenue with $240,298,001 for the seven months, a gain of $15,583,948. Cigarets netted $196,616,082, an increase of $15,460,469.

Manufacturers excise taxes amounted to $246,036,740, an increase of $106,831,143. Gasoline was the principal source of revenue with $136,714,234, an increase of $62,532,514.

The tax on checks and drafts was $24,073,017, a gain of $819,346. Telephone, telegraph, and other message tax was $11,314,339, up $3,472,402.

U. S. GYPSUM NET RISES; EQUALS $1 A SHARE IN 1933

The United States Gypsum company had net income of $1,738,926 for 1933, compared with $1,599,416 a year earlier, according to the annual report of Sewell L. Avery, president, to stockholders. Last year's net equaled $1 per share on the common stock outstanding, compared with 86 cents a share in 1932.

The consolidated balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1933, showed current assets of $19,672,121, compared with $19,235,118 at the end of 1932. Current liabilities were $1,360,020 at the end of 1933, against $1,138,910 at the end of 1932. Cash and marketable securities at the end of 1933 stood at $13,422,494, compared with $13,412,328 at the end of 1932.

Mr. Avery told stockholders that "building activities of the kind which the company serves continue at low levels, although an improvement for the year 1934 appears to be a reasonable expectation." He stated that plant additions last year amounted to $1,116,378, which included the purchase of two roofing plants.

E. J. DOYLE RESIGNS AS EDISON PRESIDENT, BUT CONTINUES WORK

Formal announcement that Edward J. Doyle has resigned as president of the Commonwealth Edison company, but will continue his service with the company without title, was made yesterday by George A. Ranney, vice chairman. Mr. Ranney issued the following statement:

"Edward J. Doyle has been for 38 years a valued employé of the Commonwealth Edison company and for the last four years its president.

"Believing that his indictment last year in the federal court as a director of a certain corporation in no way connected with the Commonwealth Edison company may be considered by some stockholders of the Edison company as detrimental to their interests, and feeling that it was appropriate for him to act prior to the annual meeting of the Edison company, he has tendered his resignation as president.

"The board fully realizing that an indictment in court is not an evidence of wrongdoing nevertheless acceded to his insistent request and accepted his resignation as president.

"In so doing it has expressed its confidence in him by requesting him to continue to perform all of the duties of the office heretofore held by him which can be performed without official title. This he has agreed to do. The position of president will remain vacant."

At the same time it was reliably reported that no consideration is being given to the elevation of P. L. Smith, recently elected vice president, to the presidency. Mr. Smith had been mentioned as a possible successor.

LIBBEY-OWENS TURNS LOSS INTO $4,200,542 PROFIT

The Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company made a net profit of $4,200,542 in 1933 compared with a loss of $295,019 in 1932, according to the annual report of John D. Biggers, president, to the stockholders. Mr. Biggers pointed out that plate and safety glass sales increased substantially as a result of the revival in the automobile industry. He said that in the latter months of 1933 there was a moderate increase in window glass sales over those a year ago.

Mr. Biggers said that during 1933 all the company's 5 per cent convertible notes were retired. Notes of a par value of $2,638,000 were purchased for cash and the remainder, having a par value of $5,400,500, were exchanged for 216,020 shares of common stock. He asserted that 8,000 shares of common stock were retired at an average price of $25.94 per share from surplus cash.

Current assets as of Dec. 31, 1933, stood at $10,158,873 compared with $7,812,844 at the end of 1932. Current liabilities at the end of 1933 were $1,627,348 compared with 1,463,628 at the end of 1932.

Power Output Lifts Margin Over Last Year

Although national production of electric power declined last week moderately below that of the preceding week, it augmented its margin over the volume of the corresponding period of 1933, according to the Edison Electric institute.

In Chicago output fell back into the seasonal rut, reducing sharply its excess over the total for the like week in 1933.

The output for the United States for the week ended Feb. 17, including Lincoln's birthday, amounted to 1,640,951,000 kilowatt-hours compared with 1,651,535,000 in the preceding period. The margin over the total of 1,469,732,000 kilowatt-hours a year ago was 11.6 per cent, against 11.4 established the week before.

Had Gained Steadily.

Up to last week national production had steadily gained against the seasonal trends, both because of severe temperatures and the expansion in industrial activity.

The output of energy in the Chicago district, comprising an area within a radius of 50 miles of the city, was 99,758,000 kilowatt-hours, against 104,416,000 in the week ended Feb. 16. The lead over the total a year ago was cut from 6 per cent to 4.5 per cent.

Chicago District Figures.

Following are the output in kilowatt hours and percentage comparisons with last year for the Chicago district:

Week ended—	1934.	1933.	Increase. Per cent
Feb. 17.....	99,758,000	95,486,000	4.5
Feb. 10.....	104,416,000	98,511,000	6.0
Feb. 3.....	104,900,000	95,020,000	10.4
Jan. 27.....	99,292,000	94,706,000	4.8

In five of the main territorial divisions the margins over output a year ago were larger than those recorded for the week ended Feb. 10, and in two others they were somewhat less. It was particularly in the industrial sections that improvement was shown.

Belmont-Sheffield Trust Depositors Get 40 Per Cent

A loan from the Federal Deposit Liquidation corporation, an adjunct of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, has enabled the closed Belmont-Sheffield Trust and Savings bank to make a disbursement of 40 per cent, amounting to $73,820, to depositors, State Auditor Barrett said yesterday.

PUBLIC SERVICE PROFIT HALVED IN LAST YEAR

Earns $2.65 a Share on Common Stock.

Net income of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois for 1933 was $2,711,522, compared with $4,848,-94" for 1932, accor...g to the annual report of James Simpson, chairman, and George A. Ranney, vice chairman, sent yesterday to stockholders. The 1933 earnings were equal to $2.65 a share on common stock, compared with $5.70 for 1932.

The report, which includes the results of subsidiary companies, disclosed that sales of electricity in 1933 totaled 1,355,128,451 kilowatt hours compared with 1,162,175,589 in 1932. These figures included sales to other companies. While sales of electricity for home use declined 1.4 per cent power business increased 12.6 per cent.

Sales of gas, excluding sales to other gas companies, increased 5.6 per cent over 1932.

Merchandise Sales Rise.

The company sold gas and electric merchandise with a total value of $902,426—an increase of 19.4 per cent over the 1932 figure. The number of units sold was 6 per cent over 1932.

During the year the company put into effect a number of rate reductions and assumed the 3 per cent federal tax. A new lower electrical rate which went into effect for industrial customers July 1, 1933, plus the payment of the federal tax, was reported as saving such consumers approximately $713,000 annually. On the same date reductions were made in a number of gas rates which it was stated saved the consumers approximately $400,000 annually.

The report pointed out that affirmative action by the stockholders with respect to recommendations of directors on reducing the par and stated value of the company's common stocks from $100 to $60 per share will create capital surplus of $24,471,127.

Cut Capital Surplus.

"Thereupon," the report continues, "the consolidated capital surplus thus provided will be reduced by $18,500,000 for [1] an additional reserve of $12,000,000 against any shrinkage in the value of investments of the Public Service Subsidiary corporation, thus increasing the aggregate amount of that specific reserve from $6,500,000 to $18,500,000; and [2] a new reserve of $6,500,000 for the ultimate liquidation of the Public Service subsidiary."

The report stated that during 1933 the company effected a net reduction of $1,784,500 in principal amount of bonded indebtedness.

Actual losses during the year, aggregating $2,501,057 on items contained in the consolidated portfolio of investments, were charged against the consolidated investment reserve. It was explained that these losses were incurred in carrying out the company's policy of eliminating investments in outside business enterprises.

Current Position Better.

The consolidated pro forma balance sheet stated that current assets as of Dec. 31, 1933, totaled $15,180,431, including $8,669,722 cash. Current liabilities totaled $9,691,256. Current assets at the end of 1932 totaled $13,985,596, current liabilities $8,150,347.

Gross earnings in 1933 totaled $34,125,335, compared with $34,894,996 in 1932. Operating expenses and taxes in 1933 totaled $24,016,025, compared with $23,621,430 in 1932.

Customers served totaled 419,216 as of Dec. 31, 1933, compared with 414,553 at the end of 1932.

A.T.&T. Holds to $9 Annual Dividend Rate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—Directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph company today voted to pay to stockholders of record March 15 a total of about $42,000,000 on April 16, which will be the regular $2.25 quarterly disbursement on the outstanding capital stock. The last annual report showed 681,000 shareholders, of whom 381,000 were women.

In deciding to continue the $9 annual dividend rate which has been uninterrupted since the last quarter of 1921, the directors undoubtedly took into account the fact that the company last year improved its net working capital by $25,700,000 to a total of $139,999,410.

At the end of last year the company showed total current assets amounting to $199,620,516 as compared with $182,543,065, at the end of 1932, while current liabilities were down to $61,121,106 from $69,723,347.

Cash Account Grows.

At the close of the year the company reported cash, government and state obligations, and bank acceptances totaling $186,644,756, which compared with $170,638,344 at the end of the immediately preceding year.

This improvement apparently followed right through to the constituent, and some of the affiliated companies, as the Bell System report showed cash assets at the end of the year of $218,919,835, which compared with $204,250,468 in the year before.

Improvement in earning power last year is shown by the following per share earnings on an annual basis by quarters: First quarter, $4; second quarter, $4.60; third quarter, $5.13, and fourth quarter, $5.30.

North American Pays Cash.

Directors of the North American company today declared a quarterly dividend of 12½ cents in cash and 1 per cent in common stock, both payable on the common stock April 2 to holders of record March 5. Previously the company has paid 2 per cent in common stock and no cash.

J. F. Fogarty, president, in announcing the dividend action, said that the decision of the board to declare part of the dividend in cash reflects the opinion of the directors that, while present condition last part of the available earnings should go to the stockholders rather than that the company retain all of the cash for investment in the business as heretofore.

Raybestos Manhattan, Inc., declared a dividend of 25 cents a share compared with 15 cents a share in the preceding quarter.

INTL. HARVESTER RESTORES WAGES TO 97 PCT. OF 1929

Wage increases, totaling six and a half per cent, have been put into effect in all American plants of the International Harvester company, it was announced yesterday. The increase, it was said, brings Harvester employes' wages back to about 97 per cent of the 1929 pay level.

Approximately 23,000 are affected by the action, which is another move, in addition to its "made work" program to help restore industrial purchasing power, it was announced. The company two years ago put into operation a manufacturing program by which implements and tractors are being assembled through the winter in excess of current sales demands, to keep its men at work.

The wage increases vary, according to different rates and standards of pay. They were put into effect about Feb. 19, in twelve plants, three in Chicago and one each in Milwaukee, Rock Island, Rock Falls, Canton, Ill., Richmond and Fort Wayne, Ind., Springfield, O., Auburn, N. Y., and Chattanooga, Tenn.

FINDS ONE MAN HAS JOBS WITH 240 UTILITIES

House Group Is Told of Linked Control.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—Evidence of widespread interlocking directorates among holding and operating companies in the field of power and gas utilities was laid before the house interstate and foreign commerce committee today in a report by Walter M. W. Splawn, former counsel of the committee and now a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Through 800 pages and printed graphs and charts the author of the now famous report on railroad holding companies traced the connections of about 3,000 holding and operating companies with each other and with larger systems.

One Has 240 Connections.

It was shown, for example, that one individual was connected with 240 companies, another with 213, three others with 175 to 200 companies. Another individual was an officer or director of 155 companies, one with 127 companies, fourteen with 75 to 100 companies, and sixty-one others with 50 to 75 companies.

The report showed that Samuel Insull, Samuel Insull Jr., and Martin J. Insull held among them 221 directorships and offices in their string of companies in 1931 and 1932.

Samuel Insull, now a fugitive in Greece, held directorships and offices in 77 companies in 1931, but none in 1932 or 1933. Martin held 59 positions in as many companies at one time, but in 1933 he held none. Samuel Jr., who reached the peak of 85 in 1931, dropped to 34 in 1932, and seven in 1933.

With Electric Bond and Share.

E. P. Summerson, who has the most connections, is secretary of the Electric Bond and Share company. Miss A. E. Koch of New York, associated with the American Utilities company, was placed second.

The report contained no specific recommendations, although it was generally assumed that its findings would figure prominently in any subsequent legislation on the subject. It is the first part of a larger study being made by Dr. Splawn on "the relation of holding companies to operating companies in power and gas affecting control."

In transmitting his report to the committee, Dr. Splawn said:

"This study of community interests differs from most such studies in that it deals with a business which by its character is conceded to be most economical when conducted as a monopoly. In industry generally, interlocking directorates have been the means of avoiding competition or of seeking to achieve a monopoly.

Not Necessarily a Monopoly.

"In the distribution of electric power or of gas one company is considered more economical and satisfactory than two with duplicate investments. Common directors between companies and systems engaged in furnishings electric power or gas are not necessarily conducive to monopoly.

"They serve other purposes. They may be the means of achieving an unified management of separate local companies, each of which has a monopoly in its locality. There is competition between electric power and gas, particularly for fuel. A community of interest between a gas company and an electric company might result in lessening normal competition.

"This objective is as a rule achieved

Foreign loans were irregularly higher and United States government long term bonds were irregularly lower. The latter in quiet trading closed off 2-32ds to up 8-32ds point.

Of the domestic railroad issues, especial strength developed in the obligations of the New York Central, Denver & Rio Grande Western, Erie, New Orleans, Texas and Pacific, Philadelphia and Reading, and the Missouri Pacific.

Oils and Utilities Strong.

In the industrial group Richfield Oil 6s were strong in heavy trading, as were most of the other active petroleum issues. A number of public utility issues scored new highs for the year.

French government bonds mounted fractionally to 1⅜ points in active dealings. French municipal loans, however, were lower for the day. German loans moved irregularly higher with the government 7s and 5½s the center of attention, rising 1½ and ⅞, respectively.

Australian Group Active.

Commonwealth of Australia issues were heavily traded in, closing unchanged to fractionally higher with the opening of subscription books today in London on a conversion loan. Japanese bonds were more active than they have been for some time, but closed with relatively minor net changes on the way.

With the latest issue of the treasury negotiated the market is now pondering the character of the government's next public offering.

Allis-Chalmers.

Investors' Guide: Please send me information on Allis-Chalmers. What is its indebtedness?—M. N. A.

Answer: Operations of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company are divided into three main classifications—industrial machinery, electrical equipment, and agricultural machinery. In each the company has rounded out its facilities so that its customers can order their complete requirements from the organization. During recent years the sale of tractors has become of increasing importance. Although the manufacture of farm equipment is, in comparison to the age of the other lines, comparatively new, it now constitutes an important division.

The company has felt keenly the effects of lessened business activity. The sale of manufacturers' goods, such as Allis-Chalmers produces, usually feels the results of lessened business first and is usually the last to reflect better business.

Orders booked. Sales billed. Net income.
*1933.. $14,271,000 $13,287,000 †$2,884,000
1932.. 12,317,000 14,764,000 12,955,000
1931.. 22,687,000 41,476,000 1,256,000
1930.. 41,600,000 45,302,000 3,605,000

*Preliminary. †Net loss.

Earnings per common share in 1931 were 96 cents, and in 1930 $2.87. The company finished 1933 with unfilled orders of $14,271,000, against $12,317,000 the year before.

Working capital on Dec. 31, 1933, totaled $23,455,000, against $25,231,000 the year before.

On Dec. 31, 1932, funded debt consisted of $13,912,000 5 per cent debentures, due 1937. There are outstanding 1,291,677 shares of no par common stock, on which no dividends are being paid.

The company is well fortified financially, has a creditable record of earnings, all things considered, and is well entrenched in its fields. Public works activity, which call for heavy duty machinery, pickup in activity in manufacturing and improved financial condition of farmers are three factors which should help 1934 earnings. The stock is speculative at present.

LOWER PRICED MOTOR SHARES IN GOOD DEMAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 21.—Heavy buying in low priced motor shares such as Packard, Studebaker, Hupp, and Graham Paige lent a dash of color to an otherwise dull stock market today.

The market as a whole showed an inclination to resume operations on the upside, but with the holiday in the offing, the bulls were not inclined to be venturesome. Several brief buying spurts were staged during the course of the day as a gesture of appreciation of Washington advices indicating that sponsors of the new bill to regulate security changes were ready to accept modification, but none of them carried through to any appreciable extent. An improved technical position due to recent shake outs was adjudged to be in the market's favor.

Improve in Final Hour.

Most of the net improvement was scored in the last hour when shorts set about to cover some of their commitments against possible happenings over the holiday recess.

Business news was generally cheerful. The power figures made a good showing compared with those for the corresponding period last year and early figures indicated a stepup of about 4 per cent in railroad carloadings for the week. The cold weather helped the coal stocks, most of them selling into new high ground on moderate gains.

Carrier shares failed to make much response to the traffic gain, however. New York Central sold down on announcement of the terms of the convertible bond issue but snapped back in the late dealings to recover all but a small fraction of its loss. Other trading favorites of the group held around their previous levels.

Oil Shares Turn Firmer.

The oils showed a firmer trend after their decline of the last two days. Standard of New Jersey looked higher. Utilities were more subdued in face of the growing threat of "regulation" in New York. Hearings on pending bills affecting the group are under way, and brokers do not look for any marked activity until the trend is more clearly established.

Renewed activity in the automobile division coincided with the announcement of a cut in sheet steel prices. As the largest consumer of steel sheets, the motor industry is the chief beneficiary of this action. Chrysler equaled its recent high of 60, but eased fractionally toward the close. Various motor accessory shares also were given a whirl.

APPROVE LOAN TO MILWAUKEE FOR EQUIPMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—Advances from the Public Works administration to the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad totaling $8,187,383 were approved today by the interstate commerce commission. The funds will be used to purchase new equipment costing $5,270,000 and to finance a $2,917,383 maintenance program.

The new equipment includes thirty modern high speed freight locomotives to cost $4,004,000; twenty-five all steel baggage-express cars costing $456,000, and fifty all steel passenger coaches to cost $1,260,000.

RAILS TO MEET WITH LABOR ON WAGE PROGRAM

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Railroad managers have replied to President Roosevelt's request for a six month extension of the present wage agreement with the word that they will confer with labor executives March 15 on a program.

The White House regarded the managers' reply as favorable to an adjustment of the threatened wage dispute.

Kelvinator Shipments Reported Above Year Ago

Shipments of Kelvinators so far this year have been two and one-half times those of the like period of 1933, according to George W. Mason, who spoke from Detroit by special broadcast to the annual sales meeting of Kelvinator division of the Commonwealth Edison company held in Chicago yesterday. The Grand Rapids plant has been operating on three 8 hour daily shifts, the Detroit plant on two. More than 200 salesmen attended the meeting, called to inaugurate a sales campaign.

Douglas Aircraft Omits Dividend to Conserve Cash

Santa Monica, Cal., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The Douglas Aircraft company today announced omission of its regular semi-annual dividend of 37½ cents a share to conserve its cash resources. It listed unfilled orders as of Feb. 1 at $6,066,836 and the unfilled orders of Northrop corporation, a subsidiary, at $1,519,505.

CHICAGO WAGES RISE; DECLINE IN JOBS ONLY 0.9%

January Showing Better than State as Whole.

Chicago's showing in employment and pay rolls was better than that of Illinois as a whole last month, according to statistics made public yesterday by the state department of labor.

Whereas the number of wage earners and wage disbursements for 1,768 establishments throughout the state, including Chicago, fell 2.5 per cent and .8 per cent, respectively, in the period Dec. 15 to Jan. 15, 798 concerns in Chicago, employing 210,472 workers, reduced employment only .9 per cent and actually increased pay rolls by 1.7 per cent.

Four hundred eighty-nine manufacturing concerns in Chicago, employing 116,941 workers, curtailed employment only 0.2 per cent and raised wage disbursements 4.2 per cent. Based on the monthly average 1925-'27 as 100, the index for manufacturing employment in Chicago last month stood at 80.8, against 49.2 in January, 1933, and the index of pay rolls at 38.9, against 28.4.

Nonmanufacturing Group Down.

In Chicago's nonmanufacturing industries employment declined 1.7 per cent and wage disbursements 0.7 per cent, from Dec. 15 to Jan. 15. Chief divisions of industries which sustained losses in Chicago last month were stone, clay, glass, metals, furs and leather goods, wood products, wholesale and retail trade. Improvement, on the other hand, was evident in printing and paper goods, textiles, clothing and millinery, and the services.

Within the Chicago metropolitan area, but outside the city's corporate limits, 112 firms reported sharp declines of 5 per cent in employment and 7.4 per cent in pay rolls.

Employers retrenched both employment and pay rolls in substantial degrees in twelve cities and industrial districts outside the metropolitan area. They were Belleville, Bloomington, Danville, Decatur, Elgin, Freeport, Granite City, Joliet, the Kankakee-Bradley area, Peoria, Quincy, and the group of "all other" cities.

Wage Rise in Three Centers.

Conversely, in three other centers both the number of workers and their wages rose in the December-January period. In Alton, where the stone, clay, glass, and chemicals enterprises were active; Springfield, where employment and pay rolls each gained nearly 10 per cent with improvement in coal mining and other nonmanufacturing groups; the Sterling-Rock Falls area, where twelve metals establishments expanded operations.

Besides Chicago, cities and industrial areas which reduced employment but increased pay rolls were East St. Louis, La Salle-Peru-Oglesby, Moline, Rockford, and Rock Island. A precisely contrary movement took place at Aurora during the period.

REPORTS PACKER EMPLOYMENT EXCEEDS 1929

Ames, Ia., Feb. 21.—[Special.]—More men are working now than in 1929 in the meat packing industry, which is operating under a form of the President's reëmployment agreement, John W. Rath, president of Rath Packing company and chairman of the board of the Institute of American Meat Packers, said last night in an address at Iowa State college.

Wages, he said, are about 90 per cent of those in 1929, according to the bureau of labor statistics. Volume of employment in the last five years has always been at least 80 per cent of that in 1926, because production and consumption of meat have been well maintained.

400,000 FARMERS SIGN FEDERAL CORN-HOG PACT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The farm administration reported today that 400,000 farmers had signed contracts to reduce their production of corn and hogs this year. Most of the contracts have been executed by middle western farmers, and campaign work in other states is just starting.

Iowa leads with a total of 130,000 contracts, representing more than 80 per cent of corn and hog producers in that state. Sign-up figures for other states are: Illinois, 47,000; Missouri, 42,000; Nebraska, 22,000; Kansas, 19,000; Minnesota, 50,000; Indiana, 30,000; Ohio, 25,000; Wisconsin, 15,000, and South Dakota, 13,000.

LARD TRADE IRREGULAR BUT CLOSE SHOWS GAIN

Trading in lard was spasmodic yesterday, with the close on lard futures 2½ to 5 cents higher.

Cash trade was fair, with regular lard $6.30, an advance of 2½ cents; while loose lard jumped 15 cents to $6.00, and leaf was unchanged at $6.25. Pork loins were quoted as easy at 10½ to 14 cents.

Spot lard in Liverpool was 9d lower, and futures were 6d lower. Exports of lard were 67,300 pounds.

Bellies were 2½ to 5 cents lower on new style and 2½ cents higher on old style May contracts. Cash bellies were unchanged at $8. Prices:

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Cotton goods markets were very quiet, with prices steady today. Trading was resumed more actively following storm disturbances, but delay in shipments was expected for some days yet. Rayon processors expect that a compensatory processor tax will be imposed on them and there is some likelihood of an advance in prices talked of in markets. Silk goods were in moderate demand. Burlaps were slightly higher. A steady demand was reported for low priced worsted dress goods for cutting up purposes.

KAHN AGAIN MAY FACE SENATE ON POOL OPERATIONS

Reveal Activity of Pool in Libbey-Owens.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Otto H. Kahn tonight faced the possibility of another summons from the senate stock market investigating committee, this time to explain his disapproval of pool operations at an appearance June 30, when his firm, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., was participating actively in such a venture.

OTTO H. KAHN.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, said he was contemplating recalling the New York financier after receiving evidence of a pool that also involved Walter P. Chrysler, motor manufacturer; Harry F. Sinclair, and others, which made a profit of $395,238.

80,000 Shares Under Option.

Mason Day, an old associate of Sinclair, who like the latter served a jail sentence for contempt of court as an aftermath of the Harding oil scandals, told the committee about the pool, and under Pecora's questioning asserted it was intended "to distribute at a profit" 145,000 shares of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company stock, 80,000 of which was held on option.

The Libbey-Owens Glass pool was organized, Day told the committee, by Kuhn, Loeb last June.

At the outset of the present Libbey-Owens inquiry, Pecora said it was related to the market activities in "repeal stocks" last summer and pointed to the stock market report that there were no manipulative activities in these stocks. He had already presented evidence of trading in American Commercial Alcohol corporation stock "which strongly establishes many manipulative activities in the stock of that company last summer," he added.

Other Members of Pool.

In addition to Chrysler and Sinclair, the Libbey-Owens pools included Lehman Brothers of New York, Bell & Beckwith of Toledo, Joseph P. Kennedy of New York, and Wright & Sexton, New York Stock exchange members. The group purchased 65,000 shares of Libbey-Owens at 26½ and was given options on 80,000 more shares at 27½ to 30½.

Charles C. Wright of Wright & Sexton did most of the floor trading and in the operation of working the market price of the stock upward, the group dealt in a million shares, both buying and selling, between June and October of last year. Day said the profits were $395,238.

With Russell R. Brown, chairman of the board, on the stand, Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, read from the minutes of the "meeting" to show that employés of an outside concern were called in to pinch hit as officers and that the stockholders were given no specific information of the activities they were called upon to ratify by proxy.

WEST SIDE BANK REORGANIZATION MAKES PROGRESS

Possibility of early reorganization of the West Side Trust and Savings bank has moved nearer with the settlement of major differences between the depositors' committee and the state auditor's office. Full cooperation has been pledged depositors by the auditor on presentation of a plan which he terms "workable."

The chief point of dissension has centered around a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for a new bank. Depositors had previously arranged for the advance but State Auditor Edward J. Barrett thought this should be made directly to the receiver for the closed bank, which could then be reorganized. The depositors' committee, which represents $1,800,000 of $3,600,000 liabilities, has tentatively agreed to this. A hearing before Judge Robert E. Gentzel is set for March 1.

Under the plan a loan of about $2,100,000 will be obtained, 19,500 of the bank's smaller depositors will be paid in full at once and the remaining 4,500 will receive 40 per cent of their claims in cash and the balance in participating certificates. Waivers for the latter group must still be obtained. Stockholders would subscribe $350,000 capital and surplus in new funds and give liability waivers to $400,000 of old stock.

UNITED MINERS-PEABODY PACT UPHELD BY U. S.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.—(AP)—The national bituminous coal labor board announced tonight it had sustained the divisional board in upholding the validity of the contract held by the United Mine Workers of America with the Peabody Coal company in Saline county, Illinois. At the same time the Progressive Miners of America, who had appealed the case, announced they would fight the matter out in the court, "no matter how far it is necessary to carry it."

Conclusions of the divisional board were that the United Mine Workers and not the Progressive Miners of America had the contract at these mines and represented the employés.

Progressive miners had contended that an emergency contract signed in 1932 between John L. Lewis, international president of the United miners, and the Peabody officials became invalid when a number of the United miners left that organization and joined the Progressive Miners of America.

The United Mine Workers have declared that their contract with the Peabody concern necessitates their furnishing miners from other localities to fulfill the contract. The controversy has resulted in considerable violence in southern Illinois.
